Ok, thanks for the heads up I appreciate it.
I've been using scanners for a long time, and it's getting tough to keep up with all the new models and their functions.
I currently have a BC9000XLT,BC780XLT,BC796D,Pro-96, and everyone is different.
I still like my 9000 for milcoms..............

Thanks again.

The Human ear.

It doesn't need batteries, can provide reliable copy when band conditions are bad, or the sender can't send well. All you need is a pencil and paper for hard copy.

It takes a little work to get good at the Ear method, but no one has ever has any problems learning it unless they're sick, lame, or Lazy.

I know what you mean with trying to remember different scanners... At home I have a 996, 3 780's 2 BC15's a BC796 and a 2096. You know how many times I tried to enter freqs on  the 2096 from the Manual mode instead of hitting the Program button?????

New features in this version (0.4.0):

- Modified code to display all 100 Quick Key systems (0-99) if used.
- Add capability to read ID tag from the scanner if the ID is not currently identified in ID Tracker II.

See link in signature for web page.

I have not gotten much feedback on ID Tracker II so either things are going extremely well or I am just not being told if there are problems occurring. I would like to hear from anyone experiencing problems with the program.

All your ear needs to decode RF is a pencil and paper?????
I certainly would like to see a demonstration. I could sell my IC-756PRO and just use pencil and paper.

No shit Sherlock. If you actually READ you would see that I said so too.

And if you actually paid attention you would already know that I am in Canada and WE require 80% on the technical exam to get a no-code license, something I fully agree with. Nothing lazy there, but you seem too lazy to figure that out.

Uh...I said CONVERSATIONAL Latin. I made that point clear AND I acknowledged Latin's use in medicine and law. Try to keep up.

Get back to me when you can cobble together a coherent argument.

Ok here it is, after NUMEROUS scanners/receivers owned and many hours of listening, I have come to a conclusion. The Pro-2006 with the OC456 full and the Probe v7 software is the BEST PC OPERATED SCANNER EVER MADE!! What a spooky combo this is! Lighting fast scanning,DTMF tone decoder, sensitive and selective, discriminator tap. But wait it gets better, PROBE v7!! If you haven't witnessed the POWER of probe, do yourself a favor and check out the reviews. WOW! The hype IS justified. No scanning software comes close! Ok, analog scanners are out right? WRONG! With a discriminator tap you can decode TONS of digital sigs. There are LOTS of FREEWARE programs out there! Now, lets move on to the condition of the equipment. On a scale from 1 to 10, I give it a 9.5! EVERYTHING WORKS on this baby! Here is what you get: PRO2006, ANTENNA, MANUAL,PROBE V7, SERIAL CABLE!! This is a KILLER scanner!! Check out the info on this rig! http://userweb.suscom.net/~pro-2006/

And Penquin boy Opus dresses up in his Spock ears when he posts.
It figures you'd be a Trekkie. BWHAHAHAHAHAHA Loser!

No you are backpedaling. You said "Latin" nothing about "conversational Latin. You should really not try to lie your way out of your screw ups.
You aren't very good at it or anything else.

Did I miss something?  In the original post, which is also in your posting, he mentions conversational latin.

The foam duck in question is the one who thinks anyone is _bothering_ to "guess" who you are. You adopted Woger Wiseman's style, and that's enough to get you the nickname of "Wabbit". Woger was never a flamer, but he thought he was, just like you.

It most certainly did work.  You weren't here for Roger & LLoyd to pump you.  The was more radio discussions and not the gay retard threads you enjoy.

That's why I said if you're sick, lame, and Lazy, then you can't or don't want to learn it.  Heard any DX on your CB lately?

The RR site is sometimes great, but I have found for the system here it's of no help. The info is outdated and has not been brought up to date. I and at least one other person tried to help, but they were not interested so I gave up. It's a great site for info, but I would not recommend buying a $500.00 scanner just because it said it would work unless you could confirm it.

I completely agree. If you want to filter out the less serious, then use a relevant method. Here in Canada, in order to get a no-code licence, you must get at least 80% on the technical. And technical prowess will always be important regardless of the mode of communication.

   "Stuff happens."

   BTW, this "Jawod" signed a message on rec.radio.amateur.homebrew as "AB8O."  I found a blank on that call sign at QRZ.

   I agree.  Manual radiotelegraphy has NONE of the body language or tone of voice or much of anything that is normal in everyday person-to-person contacts. Using this monotonic form of very early radio allows any user to be anything they want with no real references to anything but the ability to send telegraphy.

Heh heh...if the test is eliminated the expressed outrage, anguish, and horror will be a horrendous wail never to be silenced until the last code key is pried from cold, dead fingers! :-)

I'd say "clog" as in cholesterol clogging those "hearts."

"Jawod" uses "many" AS IF it were quantitative. Not so much in the USA now. The US Technician class licensees now number about 49% of all, twice as large a number as the General class. I doubt they want to hear such facts.

In the USA the number of newcomers is not able to keep pace with the expirations of licensees. That trend has been evident for more than a year. [see www.hamdata.com] The majority of new licensees are Technician class. Novice class, the supposed traditional "beginner" license has been expiring at a steady rate for years before the US changes in 2000.

"Jawod" and other morsemen think that all will "like" what they like. They really don't understand what other citizens want.

That sounds fair. In general I've approved what Industry Canada does on communications regulations...a bit more than what the FCC does for US civil radio services.

TrunkPCR version 0.8.200 Now Available for Downloading from homepage:
http://members.cox.net/fiftyone.50/TrunkPcr/TrunkPcr.html

I've been testing this new version using a PCR-2500 that has been graciously loaned from Vincent Battle... P25 Card support is still undergoing and I need your feedback to fix any kinks. To activate P25 decoding, you will have to click the FSK Mode button. It will change to P25 instead.

All of your active Control Channels will need to changed to P25, other channels will need to be changed to FM...
Any old channels that were set to FSK will have to be changed to FM and "Stored", otherwise you will get strange results when listening...

This update fixes a few bugs and has a few changes:

May 04,2006 - Added: Channel Selector using a List Display - 1 Click Tune.
May 07,2006 - Fixed: Group/Radio ID Descriptions now updated on main window.
May 08,2006 - -----: Group/Radio ID Descriptions can now be Clicked ONCE to edit.
May 09,2006 - Fixed: Multiple Displays of Frequency in CC Activity, if LCN=0.
May 09,2006 - Added: List of System Pages in CC Activity.
May 09,2006 - Added: List of User Status Updates in CC Activity.
May 09,2006 - Added: Audio Spectrum Display.
May 10,2006 - Fixed: Control List display in CC activity when Afiliation Reset Clicked.
May 12,2006 - Added: 6 Watch Group Lists in CC Activity, Set in Trunk Settings.
May 12,2006 - Fixed: Logging Buttons in Dump Display if 'Dump.Log' NOT Opened.
May 12,2006 - Fixed: Logging Buttons in Misc Display if 'Misc.Log' NOT Opened.
May 13,2006 - Added: Time Stamps to Dump and Misc Log Files.
May 18,2006 - Added: KeepAlive Function. Default was ON in Previous Versions.
May 18,2006 - Added: Raise DTR Function. Default was ON in Previous Versions.
May 21,2006 - Fixed: Dual Receiver mode in Edacs.
May 21,2006 - -----: Edacs LCN 26 to 31 Report Messages. No longer used as active channels.
May 21,2006 - Fixed: Updating Stored Freqs when Channel Editor Saved.
May 22,2006 - -----: Increased Max Groups and Radios Again.
May 22,2006 - -----: Increased Max Banks and Channels for $50 donations.
May 23,2006 - Added: Direct Entry of Frequency after using any knobs or menus.
May 30,2006 - Fixed: External Speaker Selection for PCR-100 when pluged-in or out.
June 04,2006 - Fixed: COM Status Display when Spectrum Sweep Enabled/Disabled.
June 08,2006 - Added: Decoding Wave Files for Moto/Edacs Trunking Systems.
June 15,2006 - Added: Block Data Calls in Edacs.
June 20,2006 - Fixed: I-Call Reporting in Edacs.
June 22,2006 - Added: ESK Selection in Edacs.
June 23,2006 - Fixed: Edacs Dotting was set to Zero when Trunk Settings loaded.
June 24,2006 - Fixed: Scanning in Conventional Mode when ScanBank Count =

Zero.
June 29,2006 - Fixed: Menus Enabled/Disabled when Sweep Spectrum Selected/Deselected.

Sept 21,2006 - Added: Duplex +/- Offset Buttons control frequency look-up.
Version 0.8.200 Released 09/22/2006

A new option in the BandScope will allow you to follow the active freqs according to the signal level. Double-click on either side bandscope when there is black area or the center bar. A Red line will appear indicating the watch level. This is turned on in the BandScope Menu...

MPT1327 Support is limited at this time... I'll need some input from users who have this system in their area to complete this trunking scheme...

Regards,
Jay

Slow Code you're an idiot, because only an idiot would contine to post this sort of crap over and over on multiple groups...

No code licensing has done nothing to hurt CW or other license classes, and certainly hasn't turned Ham radio into Children's Band, at least where I live (or have lived over the past 40 years or so)

I don't know where you live, but where I live, the conversations are at least as techincal on 2 meterss as they were before (even 25 years back), and maybe even more so. Given your agenda on polluting the newsgroups (and probably bands too, if you actually do get on the ham bands) with this crap that supposes than anyone that doesn't do 20+wpm code is not a ham, or other similar pretenses, I doubt if you actually are even active on the bands... (bigots rarely are, in my experience).

Yep, we talk about a lot of very technical topics, not the least of which occur on 2 meters, and on local nets, or offline on other frequencies during the day (and heave3n forbid, we actually use telephones too!, and with others outside of our area. The future of ham radio in the Hawaiian islands is likely to be relatively bright, even without an increase in CW. CW is not only the slowest method of communicating, it also is the oldest. Why don't you look into some of the relatively recent advances in the hobby, which most of us have at least evaluated and determined whether we wish to participate, rather than the continual baiting and other crap you post on the groups?

By the way, I can't recall seeing you post an actual call sign, just a "slow code" moniker, so how would any of us really know you are one of us anyway? Even if you are, your'e clearly one that should have been outed many years ago.

Despite the feeling I'm doing nothing more than feeding a troll, I feel it's time to see if you're actually real... IF SO, please reply to my email address (not on the groups, you've polluted them enough already) and we can hopefully entertain an intelligent conversation.

Thanks

What a coincidence...I used QRZ's database search engine and found a blank when I entered "Leonard H. Anderson".

Funny, eh...?!?!

anyone with any radio knowledge at all knows that a "10 meter" amp is more than broad enough to be used on 11 meters with very little retuning required (hell, the band edges are less than 600 Khz apart!).

now, there are ways to make a 10 meter amp unusable on 11, but then, it would be mostly unusable on the lower end of 10 as well. :(

so...... the label of a "10 meter amp" os pretty much meaningless, unless you can come up with a bandpass filter that has a 90+db/decade slope and a cutoff just 40 Khz from the edge of band you want to work (good luck with that as the filter would be unwieldy in both size and cost). things like this can be easily done on the upper UHF spectrum where wavelengths are short and parts are easy to fabricate..... not so in the upper HF (wavelengths >6 meters). can you imaging a cavity filter for 10 meters? it would be as big as a house and have a bandwidth narrower than your transmitters operating frequency plus its associated sidebands (am or fm) and wider still than any ssb signal (on 10 meters)

the math on this is indisputable.

    My understanding for the US, is that according to the FCC, if you sell ham gear as a business, it has to be type accepted, but you can "home brew" anything you want to use on the ham bands for personal use.  If you sell your personal equipment, it doesn't need to be type accepted, either.
    Also, if you sell an amplifier as a business, it can't operate the 12 or 10 meter band.  However, it can be modified to operate it, but that fits in the "home brew" category, again.
    I think the stink arose on the posting, because the person posting the original listing, advertised it as a CB radio amplifier, which is illegal in the US and from what I understand, most other countries.  Notice that the original poster has not posted in a while, I believe he probably has been warned, because it is off-topic and cross-posted to more than 5 groups, which is considered spam according to the TOS with most ISPs.

Hello:

What is the "official range for the normail aircraft frequencies ?
Is it 118 to 137 MHz, or does it start at 108 ?

The same question, please for Military Air Monitoring ?

Thanks,
Bob

KB9RQZ (Mark 'Morkie Moron' Morgan) feels right at home absuing the memory of my deceased daughter in order to try and gain "messaging leverage"...I have no doubt that he's your culprit.

Why does Morkie keep insisting that I am "lying" when all I am doing is quoting HIM verbatim?

Here's YOUR words AGAIN, Morkie:

Message-ID: <1158542716.987841.319690@m73g2000cwd.googlegroups.com>

KB9RQZ Said: "oh learning code is easy"

There you have it, folks! Morkie says learning code is easy!

Quoted Word For Word!

You are the one that posted about my dead mother. I am getting close to finding out who you are. Its not KB9RQZ. You are using his name and call.  I have paid a someone to help me find out who you are. You crossed the line when you made the comment about my dead mother. You think this is a joke what you are doing on here. I'm not going to make any threats here but we will meet some day. Keep posting

The band officially starts at 108. Below 118, though, you're mostly going to hear navigational (such as ILS) systems and not voice comms.
You'll also find some milair (and other stuff such as satellites) from 137-144, but the "official" band is 108-137.

>The same question, please for Military Air Monitoring ?

The "official" band is 225-400 MHz.

There no FCC procedure for "type acceptance" of ham gear, so ham gear can't BE type accepted.

There's certification for commercially produced ham gear, but that's a totally different process from type acceptance, and it looks for totally different things.  Calling certified gear "type accepted" is like calling a ham a CBer - using the wrong term (which seems to be common practice in English for a couple of decades now)

>    Also, if you sell an amplifier as a business, it can't operate the 12 or

But not by something as simple as cutting a prominent wire that's labeled "don't cut this wire".  By changing capacitors and inductors, yes - but that's home-brewing.

I think what people may be thinking about is that ham gear must be Part 15 certified (for the receiver) if it's commercially built, whereas home brew gear need not be.

(a) No more than 1 unit of 1 model of an external RF power amplifier capable of operation below 144 MHz may be constructed or modified during any calendar year by an amateur operator for use at a station without a grant of type acceptance. No amplifier capable of operation below 144 MHz may be constructed or modified by a non-amateur operator without a grant of type acceptance from the FCC.

(b) Any external RF power amplifier or external RF power amplifier kit (see S 2.815 of the FCC Rules), manufactured, imported or modified for use in a station or attached at any station must be type accepted for use in the amateur service in accordance with Subpart J of Part 2 of the FCC Rules. This requirement does not apply if one or more of the following conditions are met:

(1) The amplifier is not capable of operation on frequencies below 144 MHz. For the purpose of this part, an amplifier will be deemed to be incapable of operation below 144 MHz if it is not capable of being easily modified to increase its amplification characteristics below 120 MHz and either:

(i) The mean output power of the amplifier decreases, as frequency decreases from 144 MHz, to a point where 0 dB or less gain is exhibited at 120 MHz; or

(ii) The amplifier is not capable of amplifying signals below 120 MHz even for brief periods without sustaining permanent damage to its amplification circuitry.

(2) The amplifier was manufactured before April 28, 1978, and has been issued a marketing waiver by the FCC, or the amplifier was purchased before April 28, 1978, by an amateur operator for use at that amateur operator's station.

(3) The amplifier was:

(i) Constructed by the licensee, not from an external RF power amplifier kit, for use at the licensee's station; or

(ii) Modified by the licensee for use at the licensee's station.

(4) The amplifier is sold by an amateur operator to another amateur operator or to a dealer.

(5) The amplifier is purchased in used condition by an equipment dealer from an amateur operator and the amplifier is further sold to another amateur operator for use at that operator's station.

(c) A list of type accepted equipment may be inspected at FCC headquarters in Washington, DC or at any FCC field location. Any external RF power amplifier appearing on this list as type accepted for use in the amateur service may be marketed for use in the amateur service.

S 97.317 Standards for type acceptance of external RF power amplifiers.
(a) To receive a grant of type acceptance, the amplifier must satisfy the spurious emission standards of S 97.307(d) or (e) of this Part, as applicable, when the amplifier is:

(1) Operated at its full output power;

(2) Placed in the "standby" or "off" positions, but still connected to the transmitter; and

(3) Driven with at least 50 W mean RF input power (unless higher drive level is specified).

(b) To receive a grant of type acceptance, the amplifier must not be capable of operation on any frequency or frequencies between 24 MHz and 35 MHz. The amplifier will be deemed incapable of such operation if it:

(1) Exhibits no more than 6 dB gain between 24 MHz and 26 MHz and between 28 MHz and 35 MHz. (This gain will be determined by the ratio of the input RF driving signal (mean power measurement) to the mean RF output power of the amplifier); and

(2) Exhibits no amplification (0 dB gain) between 26 MHz and 28 MHz.

(c) Type acceptance may be denied when denial would prevent the use of these amplifiers in services other than the amateur service. The following features will result in dismissal or denial of an application for the type acceptance:

(1) Any accessible wiring which, when altered, would permit operation of the amplifier in a manner contrary to the FCC Rules;

(2) Circuit boards or similar circuitry to facilitate the addition of components to change the amplifier's operating characteristics in a manner contrary to the FCC Rules;

(3) Instructions for operation or modification of the amplifier in a manner contrary to the FCC Rules;

(4) Any internal or external controls or adjustments to facilitate operation of the amplifier in a manner contrary to the FCC Rules;

(5) Any internal RF sensing circuitry or any external switch, the purpose of which is to place the amplifier in the transmit mode;

(6) The incorporation of more gain in the amplifier than is necessary to operate in the amateur service; for purposes of this paragraph, the amplifier must:

(i) Not be capable of achieving designed output power when driven with less than 40 W mean RF input power;

(ii) Not be capable of amplifying the input RF driving signal by more than 15 dB, unless the amplifier has a designed transmitter power of less than 1.5 kW (in such a case, gain must be reduced by the same number of dB as the transmitter power relationship to 1.5 kW; This gain limitation is determined by the ratio of the input RF driving signal to the RF output power of the amplifier where both signals are expressed in peak envelope power or mean power);

(iii) Not exhibit more gain than permitted by paragraph (c)(6)(ii) of this Section when driven by an RF input signal of less than 50 W mean power; and

(iv) Be capable of sustained operation at its designed power level.

(7) Any attenuation in the input of the amplifier which, when removed or modified, would permit the amplifier to function at its designed transmitter power when driven by an RF frequency input signal of less than 50 W mean power; or

(8) Any other features designed to facilitate operation in a telecommunication service other than the Amateur Radio Services, such as the Citizens Band (CB) Radio Service.

I recently bought one and it is a good scanner. The only thing I see with it is that it does not display the 'Alpha Tag' assigned to the channel.

Why the hell did he waste his time doing that? It isn't funny or entertaining at all. Dan needs to find more constructive ways of spending his time. Besides, that transmission wasn't really that bizarre for CB.

True, but Part 15 testing has nothing to do with type acceptance.  AND, amateur radio gear is still required to meet the Part 15 radiation specifications even if the equipment is homebrew.  You don't need to send it off to a certification lab, but if you're radiating trash out of band, you're in violation of the law.

I'll say that the broadcast service normally requires type acceptance on transmitters as well, BUT there's still an exception for homebrew broadcast gear... your local AM station can put a homebuilt transmitter on the air as long as it meets the technical specifications and it has a nameplate on the front stating that it was homebuilt.  (The wording required is quite specific but it's listed in Part 73.)

It still has to meet Part 15 specs (all incident radiation devices do), it just doesn't have to be certified before you use it.

1st Responder Wireless News (1RWN), already very active, and recognized by most media outlets and Public Safety Officials as the "Industry Leader" in most of the East Coast States, is actively looking for News Correspondents to become active as Incident Dispatchers for your area.

1st Responder Wireless News, a subsidiary company of 1st Responder News, is now consider the leader in the emergency notification industry, sending incident alerts to pagers, cell phones and e-mails.

We are now active in AL, AZ, CA, CO, CT, DC, DE, FL, GA, HI, IL, IN, KY, LA, MA, MD, ME, MO, MS, NC, NH, NJ, NM, NV, NY, OH, OR, PA, RI, SC, TN, TX, VA, VI, VT, WA, WV and Canada. 1RWN has already acquired many well known Paging Notification Services including TAC-9 Paging, East Coast Paging, Ohio Fire News, Maryland Fire Network, Virginia Fire Net, Toronto Fire Net, Metro Fire Paging and the National Incident News Network (NINN), with several additional under negotiations. This is a very exciting time to become involved.

1RWN is in the final stages of development of our Dispatcher Rewards Program which will allow our Dispatchers to log into an online store and buy products ranging from cameras to antenna to two-way radios using points they've earned by being active on our system! EVERY Dispatcher on our system will now reap rewards for their hard work, dedication and loyalty!

1RWN has also recently gone live with the industry's MOST COMPREHENSIVE Customer Interface selection process which allows our Subscribers to select EXACTLY what information they want to receive, from what areas and to what devices. In other words, you can select to receive JUST building collapse incidents in Yonkers to be sent to your cell phone, with bridge closures in Philadelphia being sent to your pager. You are no longer restricted to receiving ALL alerts from a region, now YOU decide what you receive from the average 16,000 monthly alerts sent from any of the areas we cover - 37 States, Washington DC, or Canada! EVERY active 1RWN Dispatcher qualifies for complimentary service!

Why settle for the rest...when you can be with the best?

indeed if they had been willing say 10 years ago to go along with what Canada has now (which was proposed by members of NCI) this would be over long since

The midnight Cowboy guy can be heard everyday on channel 19 in the Newark, NJ area during morning commute time. He is almost always on with the same stuff...mystery.

Careful, Mark, we can't say such things due to "threats" against the pro-coders. :-)   They are muy touchy about threats against Them.

> > That sounds fair. In general I've approved what Industry Canada does on communications regulations...a bit more than what the FCC does for US civil radio services.

Well, Mark, it is like this: Some of those who have the cool HOBBY of amateur radio think they are "servicemen" in the "service of their country" for having that hobby. We can't say nasty to them because that is not "nice." They rank themselves as equivalent to soldiers, sailors, and airmen.

They want the ILLUSION that they are doing great and meritorious SERVICE. Especially the morseketeers. That is important to them. The illusion, that is. Screw the reality part of it, that doesn't apply to them (they think).

Never mind that US amateur radio licensee numbers are holding static with a slight downturn over the past three years. Oldsters are signing off permanently and newcomers are going in through the no-code-test Technician class. Most of the latter are STAYING no-code. [General Of The Amateurs Miccolis says otherwise but then he loves cooking the stats to suit his own taste]

As time goes on with the code test gone, the amateur bands WILL change. But, it will be slow since humans are living longer now. Human attrition will, nonetheless, happen. Oldsters don't want to think about that but it is inevitable to all of us. The oldsters want to preserve the illusion that they are still "young," believing in the old, antiquated ways they were impressed with. Why some even believe they are a "service to the country" by having that hobby.

There's no argument with those ancient morseketeers, certainly no "discussion." To them, all must be preserved. [read mummified]   Ptui.

Goed, dit is dus gewoon een link naar mijn online scanner.
http://www.xs4all.nl/~bjohan/
Ik draai bij mij de squelch open om even wat ruis te laten horen en druk op wat toetsen van de scanner om wat piepjes te laten horen. Ik heb ook nog even Schiphol toren aangezet. En wat denk je?

American English: "Can" = "May".  "Can" seems to be preferred in common usage.  (Then again, just look at how some of our kids spell on Usenet and in IRC and, knowing that any of them can grow up to be president, be very afraid.)

Actually that's pretty accurate. The Pro2096 and the Pro96 are for the most part identical radios. You can clone between them and they both use the same programming cable and software.

There are a few options when it comes to software, I recommend Win96 from Don Starr (www.starrsoft.com).

The programming cable is available from a variety of sources. Radio Shack has them and you can get some from eBay and other places. I actually use my Icom cable with a Stereo to mono adapter. I have to adjust the reply time a bit, but it works fine.

The 2096 is a fine radio, it decodes the digital modulation very well and the V-Scanner is pretty neat for traveling. It programs more conventionally than the 996 (Is this good or bad, you decide...)

It has been passed up by the Uniden 996 in some of the features available however, as it doesn't track 700 MHz. trunking, it requires to to select PL or DPL for tone search, has less memory channels and limits you to 10 banks. The 996 also has things like Fire Tone Out and GPS connections and more, any of which may or may not interest you.

You can usually get a new 2096 for about $400 on sale at Radio Shack and some dealers, while the 396 is usually between $525 and $550.

While I have both the 996 and the 2096, I prefer the 996 for most scanning uses. I use the 2096 mostly with a program called Pro96Comm that decodes the 9600 baud data signals used on a local trunking system.

Others prefer the 2096, if they don't need the 996's features or coverage. If 700 MHz. trunking is in your area or coming, I would go with the 996. (The 2096 can monitor 700 MHz. after programming with Win96 but can not trunk track there).

Roger isn't in prison, dumbass. Did Davey Assheil ask you to spam while he polishes Ray's knob and his wheelchair? Or is he watching Mark D and his anorexic wife?

Thanks for all the helpful information.
One more question, I currently have the Pro-96 and recently purchased a used BC796D, will the 796 do 700mhz trunking?

Thanks again,

That cable is not compatible with BC898, also there is much better software check out Scancontrol or ARC898

I took a look at the site.  From what I can tell they use volunteers to send pager alerts of interesting traffic and then turn a profit on the volunteer labor by selling subscriptions.  Is that an accurate description?

This is Correct I can not edit out any pop ups this is a free phpbb forum.
The popup blocker blocks most of mine out. Here is the rest of the website

Mark,

Why do you have to follow up to every post?  When you do they just laugh at you and keep teasing your silly dyslexic ass.  Contribute something useful to RRAP, Don't be the group retard.

You don't get it, do you? But if you insist, many many years ago you HAD to learn Latin to attend university. Then, a few people bucked the trend and started removing the requirement to know Latin. Oh sure, the old guard resisted. Many professors refused to work without Latin as a requirement, ostensibly because they felt that the Latin requirement would demonstrate serious commitment to learning. But the world progressed and now conversational Latin is no longer required, save for a few medical and legal references.

Now, would you tell your doctor that he is not a real doctor if he can't carry on a conversation in Latin? He just might be able to, but odds are he will only know what is necessary to do his job effectively.

You should know all about being a "porkbutt" shouldn't you fat boy? Have you been out in Bloomington handing out KKK flyers? Oh, thats right, you only have the guts to do that in towns with less than 500 people.

What is there on which to comment? "Can't argue with the horse's mouth"

(not quite right, is it?)

Here's another one: "If you can't dish it out, don't cook it." I have a friend who came up with a whole page of malaprops (collected sayings from his wife)

The 898, IIRC, just needs a plain old 9-pin to 9-pin cable.

Well, I sort of thought it might draw a few "Oh, gee, I guess commercially made ham linears have to be FCC type accepted after all"'s.

The guy making the CB linears fails a whole laundry list of requirements for type acceptance of a Ham linear.

And because he isn't a ham, he cannot legally build even one such unit, let alone go into production.

Neither do you, dumbass, Latin terms are used in Medicine and in the Legal profession all the time.

That was the Class D citizens band. I believe Class C is also in the 27 MC range, with low bandwidth digital modulation for remote control, etc.

Whatever happened to classes A and B? I recall Class A was AM on the 460 MC band.... took a huge amount of bandwidth both because of the modulation method and the fact the transmitters were generally not very stable...

I don't think anyone except him thinks otherwise.

The thing is... what will the FCC do about it? And are they going to do anything about the touch lamps sold at my local Wal-Mart which spew trash all over the HF band, or the local computer store which has a roll of "FCC Part 15 approved" stickers which they put on uncertified (and often uncompliant) PCs?

Probably the topic most often heard here is digital... Interfacing, coordinating IPs, hooking the system into the Internet, configuring operating systems, and getting some one's station to work in the system.

Lots of discussions on antennas which is pretty much the same as years gone by.

We have cats, one of which is bigger than some dogs and I've seen him tackle a black lab about five times his size and win. They don't crap on the carpet, but do tend to barf up the mouse they caught which is particularly nice when you are just sitting down to breakfast.

On average, I think the technical discussions go deeper now than when I first got on. OTOH people are people. When driving we comment on traffic. When hung over we tend to ... well...never mind.<:-)) So topics other than the technical ones are pretty much the same whether now or then.

I don't know the particular scanner, which is why I'm asking. Does the scanner allow you to enter alpha tags? Not Scan Control - the scanner itself. Are there instructions for entering alpha tags using the keyboard?

That is not correct. If you ask "can I eat a caramel, my reply is you may (permission) if you can (ability). For all I know you're toothless and have no ability to chew.

If you correctly ask "may I have a caramel" the correct reply is, "yes, you may."

Hmm, you think that spelling is a reflection on intelligence?  Spelling is a rather arbitrary transliteration of vocal sounds into written text.  I have known some incredibly brilliant people that couldn't spell their way out of a wet paper bag, and I have known some extremely facile spellers that couldn't reason their way out of that same bag.

The kids on IRC are using home grown abbreviations to cut down on the number of symbols they need to type to convey a message... Hams do the same thing when using RTTY, or CW.

I am sort of curious as to why my posting of the actual FCC part 97 rules that cover linear amplifiers drew exactly zero comments.

I do... and it's amazing they can communicate at all.

So if everyone under 20 confuses "can" and "may" does this make the misuse of either word correct? Hardly. If a million people do a stupid thing, it's still a stupid thing.

Believe it or not, grammar does have a place in this world. It's the correct means by which we communicate. If we can't communicate correctly, we shouldn't be surprised when things don't go the way we want them.

Just my 2 cents.

Can anyone give me an honest opinion of the above scanner? Also is it PC programmable like the Pro-96 and what would I need to to program it with a PC?

Hi All,

Is the BC898T fairly easy to program ? I live in SW Florida and we have numerous agencies I want to include. Trunk tracking is a little confusing to me.

Thanks in advance for all assistance.

because Facts have nothing to do the bashing going on personaly I think telestar is pushing the envelope a bit but I hardly care I may find a legal use for one of those amps if the FCC gets off its ass and publishes the R&O notice for examply the title of the thread CB amps and the CB grouop

Chuck,
you do point out an interesting fact:
in the last 15 years or so, the written language of the internet has come into its own. it is not unlike English in many respects (American English is an "evolved" language, much like "net speak").

today's kids know this language well and it does, in fact, convey a lot of information with a minimum of keystrokes. replacing letter combinations (the ATE sound) with numbers (like 8) can shorten word lengths while still sounding the same.

there is already research going on per this subject and several prominent papers have been presented over the last few years.... it won't be too long before someone actually engineers an alphabet for the net. that will be neat to see.

and to think, hams are the ones that actually originated tis concept with CW starting over 70 years ago.

Sorry you feel that way. These will Help:

Step 1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Step 2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

Step 3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Step 4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Neither you nor David Heil can control that, modify it, or make judgements on it leading to cessation of my rights to free speech as a citizen of the USA and as a military veteran of the USA. Yet, you actively seek to CONTROL it. Why? Because you are PERSONALLY upset by my words? You feel you are such a supreme ruler that you can CONTROL opposing opinions or wish to delete all postings which are not to some arbitrary standard of protocol demanding obediance to some self-righteous opinions held by a ruling clique?
> If you wish to delve into my "personal, non-professional" life, get together an Investigative Team. You can use those that Hewlett-Packard did (their business may have slowed since HP is under investigation and no doubt have some free time). Feel free to start with my Pastor, Ralph Midtlyng, at All-Saints Community Church three blocks away from my house. It is principally a Lutheran church but does not bar others about their "personal, non-professional life." [recall that Martin Luther was no shrinking violet on matters theological?]
> Interrogate my immediate neighbors about my "personal, non-professional life." The Topalians are right across the street, Hurleys and Brunos on either side, the Gonzalez family up on the corner. Consult old issues of Ham Radio for my address; it hasn't changed since May of '63. Try my city councilmember's office (Wendy Gruel, real name). Or possibly the Los Angeles Police Department, Foothill Division. Maybe you can extract juicy little tidbits of "scandal" to use in here to actively engage in vituperative attacks who don't fit your mold? Since you won't find any, feel free to MANUFACTURE some. Others do it, therefore it is okay?
> Yes, I suppose there is some great (grate?) significance about "personal, non-professional life" that the outraged wish to use as weapons of anti-morse destruction (see Heil's vituperation in here) against me. Try my Sex Life (heterosexual). My wife is also my high school sweetheart. I would suggest you NOT consult my wife on "personal, non-professional life" for your own emotional safety. Her name? Hundreds of our school classmates know it. Sorry, you'll have to find that out yourself > but your Investigative Team will know the correct government agency to find that out...and many more items of "personal, non-professional life" data.

> Why do you feel that AMATEUR radio activity is to be taken the SAME as Professional Activity? Why do you side with the allegations of "misconduct" in "personal, non-professional life" by someone who is a known personal attacker of those he does not like. Do you wish to add more spotlights to some imagined "dispute" between a Professional Code of ETHICS, not "morality?" Make this into a "federal case?" Why? Personality conflict? My failure to "pop to" and pay some kind of "respect" you feel "owed" to you? I am NOT OBLIGATED to do that, except in a few individual's fantasies or imaginations.
> I am NOT OBLIGATED to "pay respect" to some olde-tyme radio amateur just because they have some federal license in amateur radio. I was IN radio communications on HF full-time before some of these self-styled "rulers" of the amateur waves were born, using techniques that persist in amateur radio HF communications today. With the exception of manual radiotelegraphy which wasn't used a half century ago but persists in the mythical "standards" of US amateur radio today.
> I am NOT OBLIGATED to ANYONE who insists on calling every statement I make "wrong" or others with some smug, arrogant attitudes that they are "superior." My opinions are my opinions, those of a free and independent US citizen who has taken an Oath to preserve the Constitution of the United States.

How's your code practice coming along Markie?  It's easy and fun.  You have to learn it if you want to be a real ham.

indeed but I have no intention of wastingmy time on code I wasted years on it in my teen trying for a novice

Why settle for good, accurate, local information from local groups?

You can settle for spam and inaccurate information from a 'media giant' that claims that the media only uses them for accurate information.

BULL!

Stick with the local groups that have a history in this field. 1STR will soon fall apart as did NINN, IPN, etc...

Good luck.

Sure is, but first you need Radio Shack Part 20-047 USB serial programming cable, and a copy of Scancat Lite Plus, or similar software. It is much slower but you can also do it by hand! which will take some time, you can also look around on the web as there are many sites that show you how to build your own programmer cable.

I use my Radio Shack 20-047, to program some of my ham radios, and even a couple commercial radios.

Hope this helps,
Walter kg4bvd

You should make sure that you have a proper news reader and then configure it as has been outlined in the news.answers FAQs for the last 20 years or so. If Thunderbird won't cut the mustard, then you should drop it in in favor of one of the other three or four free newsreaders which can do the job.

Usenet users should take responsibility for their own environment and stop asking others to do it for them. Too many people have a cheesy newsreader (such as Google Groups) and are too lazy to find a good one. They are often the people who complain the most loudly about crossposts instead of doing something about it themselves.

(Hint: People using newsreaders which can filter on the Newsgroups header should develop a filter which uses that header. If an article is crossposted, there will be at least one comma in that header. To kill all crossposted articles, kill all articles with a comma in the Newsgroups header. You can also use the Xref header to do the same thing by searching for two or more colons.)

My old Radio Shack Pro-51 is getting a bit tired and I'm thinking it's about time to drag it to the back of the barn and give it one in the neck.

Any suggestions as to replacement? I've been thinking of Yaesu VR-500, but, as it has been around for a lot of years, I suspect there are several possibilities in the same approximate price range ($250-500) that are more advanced than that.

I really haven't followed the markets over the past years, so I'm kinda in the dark (lots of brands, yupiteru, bearcat, uniden etc. etc.)...

My basic requirements:
- Aviation traffic monitoring (99.9% of the time)
- I would be nice to monitor/control the scanner via Linux over [serial] connection
- Must be portable.

I'm all ears...

Wow, thank you for all of the advice everyone. Apparently I have some more reading to do...

In the meantime I put together an off-center dipole 48" up 18" down using aluminum wire. I understand there are probably better options, but this provides significant improvement over what I had before.

Just one question about this antenna - how would one estimate the impedance? I don't have an impedance analyzer. I have read in this NG that the impedance will be roughly 300 Ohm, and that a TV-type balun would bring it down to 75, which would be better than 300 if not ideal. I have read elsewhere that it will be roughly 75 Ohm and no balun is necessary. What is the truth?

I do have a 4:1 balun that would work if impedance is around 300, but if impedance is around 75 would there be any benefit or harm in using it?

Thank you all again,
Paul

They run close to $500.00 new. If you see one on Ebay that is a buy it now or is won for $200.00 I would be VERY surprised if it actually worked when you got it. If you really want to take a chance, make damn sure you pay with a Credit Card. At least then when you get it, if it does not work you will get your money back. If the seller will not let you pay with a Credit card don't even consider it.

"then upload them." Lol, now your just being retarded... [he cant upload]

It is "hosting" a phpbb for him, he isnt given ftp access so no "uploads", he is only given admin access to the phpbb board...

I understand these terms, and you have ftp access to the space that GoDaddy allocate you... he doesnt, so all I can say is "learn to read"

I nacw a Pro 51 on ebay now that has been very useful to me. It is especially good on aircraft band. If you want to stay the same let me

The truth is that a scanner that covers a wide range of frequencies rarely shows 50 ohms, and that's only over a very narrow frequency range, so I wouldn't worry about it. Putting on a balun may improve reception on some frequencies, only to degrade it on others.

Roy. I appreciate your point and I'm sorry for disturbing the newsgroup. It won't happen again, I promise. I'm glad we have RRAA because I had antenna questions they couldn't answer over in rec.radio.cb

Does one long continuous wave(CW) make your antenna warm in the winter?

What kind of antenna do you use to receive CW, a vertical co-linear ground-plane or some form of half-wave Dipole? What's Best?

Does antenna polarization matter if the CW is high speed and received with a computer?

A lot of hams now are Appliance Operators and hate CW, how can they keep CW of their antennas?

I heard like if you hook the coax to your dipole antenna in reverse, CW comes out backwards, Like POTS would come out as STOP. Is that true?

Thanks Roy, keep up the good work! You're doing a good job. 73

Don't confuse Marks un-intelligable babble as flames, it's  just un-intelligable babble.  I don't know why I asked the question in the first place.  KB9RQZ is living proof it's gone downhill.

"BH 340" begins work in support of Shuttle landing

It is Thurs, 2:43am EDT (0643z).

USN NP-3D #150522 "BH 340" of the Pt Mugu VX-30 "Bloodhounds" has been at Patrick for several days waiting to assume his duties for the Space Shuttle STS-115 landing. Moments ago he departed Patrick AFB and is headed to an orbit at FL220. At the moment he is up with ATC on 132.45.

This acft is "Cast Glance" equipped. Cast Glance is a system of stabilized high-power optics used in range surveillance and data collecting.

I will be trying to snag his mission freq for this landing and will pass it along as soon as I hear him.

The NASA weather plane has been up already; heard him on 126.65 with Weather Com. He orbited around the Shuttle Landing Facility here, and announced fine weather conditions for the landing.

The Shuttle landed on time, shortly after 6:20am EDT (1020z). Comms were clear from the Shuttle on 259.7 during their approach and landing here on Rnwy 33.

The KSC ground freqs are busy now with comms from the convoy of vehicles approaching the shuttle on the runway, fire dept, security, etc.

While listening to the comms from the Shuttle, I was watching the landing televised by NASA TV. The view was through the pilot's HUD; it was a spectacular landing.

Of course, if you're not "into" ham radio - you'd never know that - would you? Cell phones have their limits too. Just as FRS, and others. ALL modes have "limits". AND this is not to say I'm "pro" code. I learned it for my licenses, I listen to it and use it once in a while but not as much as some and a tad more than many. It isn't all about the "code". That hasn't kept the ass holes from invading the airwaves. Don't knock something you've never tried. There is more to it than "just" talking. But, like choosing a "Cell phone" for features - be it video, internet, etc. - aside from "just" talking - ham has many choices too. If you don't like one mode - you try another. Some buy cells "just" for emergencies, while others buy them for all the reasons and effects they can offer. IT IS A MATTER OF PERSONAL TASTE. Cells are the "current" fad just as Ham was to many of you who have never bothered to jump in. Some day Cells will be a thing of the past as well. Like Ham, Cell is NOT the answer to all of life's problems. I've seen THEM fail too when needed most.

Since no one (not even Motorola) knows exactly how rebanding will end up, no one can know what scanners can or can't survive it.

Albertto,

I've been very happy with Pro-51. I don't have anything negative to say about it and I'd still want to continue with it if I could.

The thing is that battery power doesn't work anymore ('DC9V In' still works), 'light' -key doesn't work anymore, 'K/L' -key doesn't work anymore, #6 & #8 -keys works intermittently and the case is "slightly" cracked. :)

I don't want to make any hasty conclusions, but I suspect that dropping it three floors down the stairwell didn't do it much good, neither do I think it is a good idea to try to sell it thru eBay :)

(Actually I was totally surprised and impressed to see it even a tiny bit alive after the fall!)

The thing is, I'm interested in something "new" I can live with for the next - say - 10-15 years.

Cheers and all that, take care!

Who knows. I would not recommend buying anything from them, just use it to see if you can actually hear what the PD is sending. It's real iffy asking around. Someone may "tell" you it's something you can pick up, but if you buy a Digital Scanner then find out they did not know what they were talking about, you are sitting there with an expensive scanner that will do you no good. We have a P-25 system here, but I have never been able to find out for sure if it can be monitored or not. I have found that the only way to know for sure is find a Digital scanner and try it. If a Pro-96 will pick it up, then you can thank them, go out and buy a Uniden.

Here is a list of the band designations and allowable modes after the FCC Report and Order comes out eliminating the Code Requirement.

Note: This bandplan has been endorsed by the C.B.R.L., Citizen Band Relay League, 225 Main Street, Newington CT.

Band	Frequency Range(MHz)	Allowable Emmissions
CB-160	1.8 - 2.0	Splatter Mode, Echo-mics o.k.
CB-80	3.5 - 4.0	Belching & Farting permitted on 3.950
CB-40	7.0 - 7.3	Splatter mode, 7.2 echo-mic calling freq.
CB-20	14.0 - 13.35	Jamming modes permitted on 14.313
CB-15	21.0 - 21.45	Noise Toys & Roger beeps ok below 21.250
CB-11	27.185	National New Ham calling frequency.
CB-10	28.0 - 29.7	Tweak your CB a bit more and you're there!
CB-02	144 - 148	Farting and repeater kerchunking.

Profanity, insults, and Cursing are permitted if phrases like "Old Extra licensee" or "Morse Code" are used in the same sentence.

Discussions of a technical nature are rarely heard and prohibited anyway.

27.185 MHz is also the prefered frequency for new hams to let out a mating call.

Ten Codes are prefered for brevity.

See ya on the new Bands!

Anne

Running more than 4 watts on 27 MHz in the US has been illegal since CB became legal here - 1961 IIRC.  I don't know what the rules are in Oz.

Al, yes more or less the same rules in Oz - type approval etc, but this gear is not considered as a collectable boatanchor though, so a bit off topic in the boatanchors forum - maybe an excess of cross-posting.

From the official Web site:

" They Call Me The Midnight Cowboy...
Late on the night of 9/20/06 (actually 9/21/06, 0528 UTC), Dan Quintiliani, K3DRQ stumbled across a bizarre CB transmission while tuning the dial on his IC-725 ham radio transceiver. The transmission went something like this:

"They call me the Midnight Cowboy, the Midnight Cowboy, They call me the Midnight, Midnight, Midnight, Midnight, Midnight..."

...over and over again.

So, Dan decided to record this transmission on his computer, and (soon afterward) to make a techno remix of it."

John B. - have you checked www.radioreference.com to see what type of digital system is in use? As far as I know, you can monitor/decode/trunk track any digital and/or trunked system unless it is encrypted, OpenSky, Passport, or ProVoice. (I am sure there are exceptions to this "rule".)

Actually it was 1957 when they took the 11 meter band from the HAMS and created the "Class-D" Citizens radio service....The callsigns were 11W1234 series of calls.
If this guy wanted to market these amplifiers and not attract the wrong attention all he would have to say is they are for amateur use only, with broadband coverage from 28 to 30Mhz.HAM gear does NOT require ANY "type acceptance" at all..
It's not real hard to figure that they would indeed work on 21/24 and 27Mhz....food for thought....

My fault for not noticing your ng.  I guess newer amps wouldn't be too collectable, although I do recall an article in QST (or was it CQ) many years back about a pair of 4CW300s running in the trunk (boot) of a car.  That kind of amp would probably be considered pretty collectable.

Home brew ham gear does NOT require ANY "type acceptance" at all..

Commercial ham gear must be type accepted.

Chris,

Normally I would agree that killfiles and delete buttons are certainly indicated in a case like this, but there is a certain amount of newsgroup etiquette that is warranted on your part, too. You can't just do whatever you want on a newsgroup with no accountability and expect everyone else to modify their behavior to accomodate yours. You even cite Usenet etiquette in your own post, so how about doing your share in applying said etiquette to yourself?

Regards,

Al

Al, these guys don't care what we think. You should of read what they said about my dead mother. I'm doing some research right now as who said that and I am so sick of this I am ready to go on a road trip. He doesn't realize that I am a disgrunted postal worker. Shouldn't of said that about my dead mother!

Sez you, you smarmy, liar.  One of the posts I sent to the FCC was from the guy who makes the units, claiming they were for CB.

By the way, This "newbie" got his first ham license in 1952, and his first Commercial License in 1955.

Yes, it hinders.

It keeps out the stupid and lazy.  Individuals that really don't what to be hams if it requires knowledge and skill to get a license.

Make them stay on CB and FRS. They're not an asset to the service.

And neither are you.

Besides playing the same Crap over and over constantly, Todd doesn't even change the order of the shitty songs much. What a terrible disk jockey.

He could at least have a little variety in the order he plays the shit.

Another one that's good is ask people how to modify your scanner to receive cell phones.

Again, He cant remove the ads... I also run many PhpBB and PhpBB2 boards, and I know that from within phpbb admin, you can set up the forum, change the permissions, change catagories, mod and admin access but there is nowhere where you can edit the HTML on which the forum is displayed..

The Ads are part of the phpBB styles, which you have the "upload" by ftp and then "install" in phpbb admin in order to change....

He cannot do this as it is a FREE FORUM HOST... the only access he has is phpbb admin.. NOTHING ELSE>..

Your wrong, just admit it and go on with ur life...

NOTE: If he was hosting his own forum using phpbb and mysql databases then YES he could change anything he wanted, he could upload any new styles, or edit the templates himself, but as he doesnt have access to the webspace itself, then he only has limited access to what he can do

BULLSHIT! Code is NOT KNOWLEDGE!!! I have NO problem learning technical info that helps me use the radio properly. Code is not needed to do that.

Get off your high-horse already.

>Make them stay on CB and FRS. They're not an asset to the service.

CB and FRS don't have the range.

>And neither are you.

Who the FUCK are YOU to make such a statement? You snot nosed, arrogant PRICK! You do NOT know the kind of person that I am!! Wake up and smell the cappuccino! Code is obsolete! Knowing code does NOTHING to make somebody an "asset to the service". And, could you explain what makes a person an "asset to the service"?

What fantasy do you hold that you would believe that your tiny-fisted tantrums would have more weight than that of a leprous desert rat, spinning rabidly in a circle, waiting for the bite of the snake?

Waxing poetic now?

Yes it's obsolete. Yes, it's fun.

Should it be used to qualify? Let the FCC decide (soon).

If it is eliminated, will that change the "Service"? Maybe.

Will CW disappear? Probably not.
Historically, it defined ham radio, so it has a special place in the hearts of very many hams. It's natural that they sort of cling to it.

Will CW's elimination be the end of ham radio? Of course not.
Ham radio will cease when all the hams die off. New hams are needed, with or without code.

My personal hope is that a significant minority of these new hams will take up CW and learn to enjoy this mode. It truly is a fun mode. I hope people will WANT to learn it.

Compulsory things are seldom welcome,,,some are necessary. Is CW a good requirement for ham radio? I guess it has probably outlived its day.

A requirement related to other digital modes would make a good replacement. True?

The above transcript is an URBAN LEGEND.

It 100% WILL NOT work as stated.

The full story of this particular amusing Urban Legend is at the URL below...

http://www.snopes.com/autos/techno/keyless.asp

Wireless Entry devices for passenger cars and trucks use RF.
They do not use audio. Also, the RF signal from a keychain Auto Remote Entry device WILL NOT carry atop a cellular telephone transmitted signal.

If this method were true and did work as stated, hackers would sit in parking lots with scanners and computers getting the embedded signals off of people's keychains and the result is vehicle Grand Thefts would increase 5000% and nobody would want to own any type of a wireless entry system on their car or truck.

I am amazed that Bell stated this, as with his background in ham radio and broadcast electronics, he should have known this was a crock of chicken beaks....

Could anyone recommend a reasonably priced scanner that can pick up APCO PC25 digital transmissions? My hometown's PD & FD recently switched over to that mode - so with my "old" scanner, I have NO idea what's going on in town anymore! Reason for wanting a cheapie is that EVERY OTHER department in the area is analog and I can monitor them just fine with my Bearcat 9000XLT (which I love!). So, basically looking for a 2-channel P25 unit - heh.
Thanks in advance.

John B.

What's your idea of "cheap"? Also you need to make sure they can still be monitored. Just because they went digital does not mean you can pick them up with a Digital scanner. Unless you can find another person in your area it's hard to know for sure. perhaps the best way would be to go to a local radio shack and see if they have a digital scanner to demo. then see if you can pick up the local PD.

Think Back, Are todays conversations on 2 meters as technical as they were 25 years ago, or today might you hear things like:

"I woke up this morning with a pimple on my butt" or

"The dog crapped on the living room carpet again."

Allowing no-codes on VHF & UHF has made discussions less technical and more like CB. Don't let your hatred of CW destroy our HF bands too.

It's written tests and CW that keep the sick, lame, and lazy, out of your receiver, not a plonk button or kill-filter. Don't degrade receiver performance.  Support keeping CW, and increasing the speed requirement, and make the passing score for writtens 85%.

Unfortunately the RS stores in Ontario are now called "The Source by Circuit City" Electronic toy crap that can be bought at fleamarkets BUTTTT they are still the only store around that sells resistors, caps, solder, alligator clips, and other wierd stuff Wally mart doesn't.

Man, are we screwed.

I agree in principle; we can work out the details later. What we obtain too cheaply we do not value highly. Keep the standards high. Put some teeth back in ham tests. That tends to weed out those who aren't serious. While not a panacea it would go a long way toward cleaning up a lot of the dreck we now deal with on a daily basis.

As a reader and frequent contributor to the rec.radio.amateur.antenna newsgroup, I see a large and increasing volume of messages cross posted to a large handful of groups which have nothing to do with antennas. Not surprisingly, I don't see any of the regular contributors to this newsgroup participating in the endless arguments about Morse code, testing requirements, and what it takes to be a "real" amateur. These threads seem to be increasing in number daily, involving the same participants, and have grown to the point that the signal-to-noise ratio of rec.radio.amateur.antenna newsgroup is getting seriously degraded.

It's becoming necessary to fish through multiple off-topic threads to find the postings involving antennas.

There's no point in including rec.radio.amateur.antenna in the list of newsgroups you send these postings to. There are certainly groups whose readers are much more interested in participating or reading about these topics.

So my request is: Please don't include rec.radio.amateur.antenna in the list of newsgroups you send the original posting to. And when replying to a thread whose topic doesn't involve antennas, simply delete rec.radio.amateur.antenna from the list of newsgroups receiving the reply, before clicking "Send". This won't detract in any way from your discussions, and will be a relief for rec.radio.amateur.antenna readers and participants.

Thanks and 73,
Roy Lewallen, W7EL

There's an internal battery in some phones to keep the memory alive if you change batteries, but it wouldn't actually run the phone for more than a small fraction of a second. It's about as powerful as the CMOS battery in a computer.

Or just tell the company to disable the phone you have on your account
- they have all the information they need in their database. Although you CAN get the IMEI of a cellphone very easily.

Or just learn enough PHP to rewrite the files, then upload them. It's not even as difficult as what I do every day for a living - PHP is a pretty simple language. Next you'll tell me that programs written in C++, or Jovial, or ATLAS can't be changed.

>He cannot do this as it is a FREE FORUM HOST... the only access he has >is phpbb admin.. NOTHING ELSE>..

If he can't even upload the phpBB files, it's not even a host - he's being given access to someone else's BB. If he can upload the phpBB files, he can change them before he uploads them.

GoDaddy hosts my phpBB (that means that it runs on their computers - they have nothing to do with the PHP code I upload to the site) and I rewrite it any time I want to rewrite it, so don't tell someone who's done it that it can't be done. Learn what "hosting", "uploading" and "programming" mean.

Absolutely not. Back in the 70s we would discuss antennas, circuitry, the pros and cons of certain radios, cars, boats, guns, and such. Occasionally we would discuss more esoteric things like philosophy and history (conspiracy theories were always a favorite). We kept away from politics and religion, mostly, except we would discuss them in general terms.

Come to think of it, HF was the same. These days, it's hardly worth turning the radio on most of the time.

That might be an oversimplification but it's generally accurate. Like I said earlier, what we obtain too cheaply we do not value highly.

> Amateur Radio, a National resource.

Too many of us forget that if we weren't a resource we would be legislated out of existence.

Sure!

I guess that you were not around during the heyday of the 14.313 and 75 Meter Jamming Wars of the late 70's and 80's.

ALL of the QRM'ers involved had a General or better and in those days you had to pass a 13 WPM code test to even GET ON the HF spectrum.

Your argument is as pointless as your ball-shaped fart head.

This is a prime example of why we don't have many intelligent discussions on this board.  Anyone who says anything halfway interesting gets flamed by the resident gollums and trolls.

My request is: Please learn about kill files, and please learn how to take action yourself by killing all posts crossposted to groups other than rec.radio.amateur.antenna. You'll have a much greater chance of changing yourself than you will of getting everyone else to do your bidding, and you'll be a whole lot less frustrated once you do figure that simple task out.

I have a theory about hams who can't even master a news reader, but I'll leave that discussion for another thread.

Chris, we don't mind using the filters. The problem is they (you) are changing the subject every single day so we are constantly making new kill filters. THATS the problem.

And so I'm gathering in doing further research online. The P25 card to pop into one of these high-end Unidens is almost $200 alone! There are a few used P25-ready scanners on eBay going for around $200 --- that's probably my best bet.

No, YOU are the problem.  A proper kill filter will kill all crossposts, no matter what the identity of the poster may be.  If you really knew how to use a kill filter (and you obviously don't), morphing posters would present no problem at all.

You also top post, and that makes it obvious that you have a lot yet to learn about Usenet.

Hey man,

Instead of insulting someone and trying to prop yourself up with your expertise, why not just share your "wealth"?

Good point and great idea of going to Radio Shack in town. I'm sure others have gone there looking for the same.

Hope you can find the info you want. If it turns out they have gone to a Non encrypted digital you can hear, I would get a Uniden if you want to listen.
They will run around $500.00 for one that will pick up the Digital, but they have a nice one that fits in a shirt pocket.

It works perfectly. A 4WD could save your life when it would be lost in a 2WD. So why shouldn't the government mandate ownership of 4WD's only?

Hi....Im new to ham Radio and have an all-band discone on my roof that I use for my scanner. I also will use this antenna to transmit with my ham radio. So far, it works OK for the transmissions.
Lead in line is 50ft of LMR-400 with 'N'  connectors. My question is,
Can I split the line for 2 locations? I like to listen to my scanner in my back yard and transmit with the Radio but I also would like to have a line indoors when the weather isnt great. Can I add a splitter and run a new line indoors ?
Or, should I have a dedicated line to run inside?  Thank You for any responses....Mike

Maaybe it never occured to this Dufus, that these columns were built in 30Ft lengths and bolted together, or welded, as the building was erected. Since these columns were all designed to be in "Compression", when the lateral failure of the Exterior Tube happened, they would naturally come out of compression, and break at their 30 Ft original lengths. Duhh, this is first Year Structural Engineer stuff, but I guess it would be beyound, the comprehension of the above, GED Dufus.......

It doesn't matter to them - all they want to do is ignore the obvious and try to stir up shit. What they fail to see is when they ignore the facts - it makes them look like the assholes they are.

Personally, I hate seeing all this 9/11 stuff being restirred. Not because of disrespect - but because it makes me want to go out and destroy all those rag heads for causing the deaths of so many innocent people. IMHO - we're treating them with kid gloves, even those who now reside in this country "supposedly" legally. I don't trust a one of them. WAR IS WAR. They didn't give a shit about who they hurt or killed - why the hell should "I" care if they all die? I DON'T. Their so called religion is about peace.........
ROFLMAO......... PEACE MY ASS........ Its their way or no way. FUCK THEM
ALL - AND ANYONE who wants to side with them even if making conspiracy twists to try to say those ragheads had nothing to do with it.

It's Not a Code, no code problem, it's a generational problem!

In the past week, the articles that seemed to get the most play on ham sites were the Southern Border Volunteers and the lack of brotherhood in ham radio.

I was amazed at the responses that were both negative and critical of supporting a group that wanted to protect our borders. I suspect some passengers were probably tsk tsking the only guy in four airplanes with the guts to do something to stop the rag heads on 9/11. How else can you explain rag heads armed ONLY with box cutters were able to control three airplanes? Many of the younger generation find it easier to criticize than take action.

Ham radio went to hell when Dick Bash got involved with his published "cheat sheets".

This piece is from the prospective of a ham with over 50 years spewing RF throughout the world. At 68 years of age, I look back at my start in ham radio, appearing before a steely eyed FCC examiner in Norfolk Virginia. I missed the distance for a Conditional license by about 11 miles. I had to walk between school and home in the snow, uphill both ways.

Do I think that everyone should have to do what I did to become a ham? Nope, I can live with the memorized exams, the no code, etc. Like the parable of the workers in the vineyard, I accept the rules have changed. At no place in the parable does it tell the late arriving workers to ridicule those that worked all day.

Just as sure as these words are on your screen, you too will someday be an old fart just like me. As you enter the dotage of your life, health concerns and the condition of your aged friends, becomes more of a concern. We, like you, used to talk about more contemporary subjects. Unlike a number of you, we allowed the older folks to have their conversations without ridicule. It is called respect, and is a two way street. Realize that when I was a newby, I suffered the same as you at the hands of the old farts. They believed that for you to enter their group, you should first show respect and learn to snatch the pebble from their hand.

None of you started in your working life as the CEO of the company, yet many of today's generation feel that a newly minted license conveys total knowledge. What you have is a license to learn, take advantage of it and the brotherhood will naturally follow.

If we all took the time to show each other respect, and be less quick to judge, not only would ham radio be better, but our lives as well.

Still doesn't work since the FCC doesn't mandate use of CW.

The hijackers on Flight 93 were stopped by more than one guy. And the people on the other planes did not know the hijackers were on a suicide mission.

> How else can you explain rag heads armed ONLY with box cutters were able to control three airplanes?

Simple:

- The hijackers killed one or two people who tried to resist.
- Then they said they had a bomb aboard.
- They also said that if the passengers did as they were told, nobody else would get hurt.

You have to remember that before that terrible morning 5 years ago, suicide-hijacking was unknown. Hijackers took over planes to get ransom, or to get transportation somewhere, or for political reasons. They always had demands and always promised that if their demands were met, nobody would get hurt or killed. And the conventional way of dealing with them was to do what they wanted, get the plane on the ground safely, negotiate, and then go after them on the ground.

All that changed on Sept 11, 2001. Look what happened when that shoe-bomb guy tried it.

The folks on Flight 93 had two things the people on the other flights did not:

1) They knew the rules had changed - they knew what the hijackers were going to do.

2) They had time to formulate a plan and time to implement it.

Just like their predecessors.

Well, I don't know if it "went to hell" but I agree 100% that Bash's "cheat sheets" were a very bad thing for amateur radio.

Remember, though, that it was the top folks at FCC who decided not to prosecute Bash. Lower-level FCC officials had evidence against him, and wanted to go after him with criminal charges - but the leadership said no. Those FCC folks who decided to let Bash get away with his "cheat sheets" almost 30 years ago were not young people then.

At 68 years of age, I look back at my start in ham radio, appearing before a steely eyed FCC examiner in Norfolk Virginia. I missed the distance for a Conditional license by about 11 miles. I had to walk between school and home in the snow, uphill both ways.

HAW! That's a good one!

Keep beating that horse.  It may be dead, but I'm sure that with your enthusiastic efforts it will be on its feet in no time.

Now you have some idea of why most of that reagion wants to kill all of us.
For over a generation "Made in USA" was on the bombs that killed them and the planes that dropped.
The ones who DON'T THINK react just as you do.

Sorry dude, MY line of thinking - DIDN"T INVITE THOSE COCK SUCKERS HERE TO KILL. "I" had nothing against them until they pulled this shit off. AND for that - I will NEVER forgive them. They all deserve to die. Even their brand of religion is "flawed".

I guess you're one of those who would open the gates to allow them all to move in and the Mexicans too - huh?

Dude - I DO think - every fucking day about those 3000 + killed.

>It's Not a Code, no code problem, it's a generational problem!

Why are you younger generation kids so retrograde compared to my, OLDER generation, Freddie? :-)

Is your generation's generator turning over? Not much coherent stuff being generated there...

>In the past week, the articles that seemed to get the most play on ham sites >were the Southern Border Volunteers and the lack of brotherhood in ham >radio.

Oh, wow! South Carolina is in danger of being over-run by Mexicans?!? Losing the "brotherhood?" Have you tried recruiting a "sisterhood?" :-) Freddie, I live in southern California. California borders Mexico. Guess what, that border is only around 3 hours drive from me. :-)

>Ham radio went to hell when Dick Bash got involved with his published "cheat >sheets".

Really?!? I thought it "went" when you hams were allowed to use VOICE! :-)

Or maybe when SPARK was outlawed?

>This piece is from the prospective of a ham with over 50 years spewing RF

You forgot BAREFOOT, Freddie. :-)

So, you "spewed RF throughout the world" over 50 years ago?

Unidirectional? I started in February 1953, HF beam patterns pointed in many, specific directions...thanks to the United States Army Signal Corps. :-)

>Just as sure as these words are on your screen, you too will someday be an >old fart just like me.

Poor baby, born in 1939. Tsk, tsk, tsk. That makes me 6 or 7 years OLDER than you, Freddie.

>As you enter the dotage of your life, health concerns >and the condition of your aged friends, becomes more of a concern. We, like >you, used to talk about more contemporary subjects.

WTF? Freddie boy, just WHO are you posting to? [see the bottom since you didn't format this for proper quoting and replies]

>Unlike a number of you, >we allowed the older folks to have their conversations without ridicule. It >is called respect, and is a two way street.

Freddie, you are demanding ONE WAY driving on a two-way street.
When did you last take a driving test? :-)

> Realize that when I was a newby,
>I suffered the same as you at the hands of the old farts.

Poor baby. Snif, snif.

>They believed that >for you to enter their group, you should first show respect and learn to >snatch the pebble from their hand.

You mean DRINK in their hand, don't you? :-)

WHY did "your elders" have PEBBLES in their hand?

>None of you started in your working life as the CEO of the company, yet many >of today's generation feel that a newly minted license conveys total >knowledge. What you have is a license to learn, take advantage of it and the >brotherhood will naturally follow.

Sigh...Freddie, you may be too far gone in your dotage? :-)

NOT in THIS group in this Din of Inequity, Freddie. Ain't NO "respect" unless one is a devout morseman worshipping at the Church of St. Hiram.

>If we all took the time to show each other respect, and be less quick to >judge, not only would ham radio be better, but our lives as well.

Whoopee, a MAXIM! You ARE in the congregation of the Church of St. Hiram!

I am supposed to "respect" you for your 'age?' :-)

So, does your quaint little pebble-filled maxim work the OTHER way, Freddie?

When are YOU going to show respect for those OLDER than YOU? :-)

[watch out, I have lots of 'pebbles'...:-)]

And the women and children who have died every day from bombs, bullets and starvation since the first gulf war had nothing to do with 9/11.
In fact there probably were no people from Iraq on the planes and you buy some of your gas from the country with the most people represented Saudi, Arabia.

I doubt you know enought about your religion to call Islam flawed.

"I had nothing against them" is similar to BillCosby's "I have nothing against them" in his classic monolog on bigotry.

I had been inside all those buildings many times myself as a broadcast engineer. I do know that the top floors of both of the tall towers had lots of very heavy items such as massive TV transmitter plants, both analog and new digital ones, new digital antennas for tv where being added on the roof and also the motor structures for the upper elevators where on the top floors.

That is why they call it "war", and that is unfortunately how you win wars.
Every "real" leader i.e. Patton, have known this for a long time. There is no such thing as a "surgical" war. I dont care how careful you are. Those ragheads have been terrorizing, and blowing people up for a long, long time. Its time to end it, no matter what it takes. If we dont, your grandkids will be praying to Allah someday. Phrase from the Koran: " By the sword ye shall convert"
And these bastards are seeing to it. Kill them ALL now, no matter what it takes (Period). But unfortunately we dont even need to have the ragheads ruin us,, the bleeding hearts in this country are already doing it for them.

Gosh, where have I heard that before. I remember, it was when we were trying to stop the domionos by fighting in Viet Nam.

Phrases from the bible,
Matthew 10:34
Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

Luke 12:51
Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division: For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three. The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; the mother in law against her daughter in law, and the daughter in law against her mother in law.

He that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.

YOU do not know me. I don't know YOU either - so do NOT suppose you can tell me how I can think or feel. I do NOT have anything against ANY people. It is not "me" who is declaring the wars - but since they found it in their liking to come here and kill - then they shall be killed. And I'm not suggesting the women or children - but the murderous pricks who did it or want to perpetuate it. WHO are YOU to offer an excuse? They'd slit your throat in a heart beat. They don't give a fuck about you either. OR is it you're one of them?

Yes, their religion IS flawed. They want to die to receive 70 virgins and so on? What the hell's with that? They don't even use the women here - they keep them covered up. And as for "Virgins" - don't those dumb bastards know that once used - they're no longer virgins? On the other hand - who's suggesting they're virgin "women". They suck each other off enough - could be men, goats, donkeys, camels, etc.

There is NOTHING you're going to tell me to want to forgive that yellow bellied low life prick and all his cock sucking buddies. Again, much as I don't like Bush, at least he goes out in public - not hiding in caves. OBL is a Yellow Bellied ASS HOLE. Were it not for his money - he'd be just another piece of shit.

Forget the Bible versuses dude - they do me no good. Christ isn't here - nor is God - to stop this craziness - nor will they be. They've been coming to earth for "centuries" - they've not arrived yet. Furthermore - it is said that Christ himself will rise against the anti Christ - so that makes him too - a "warrior". So don't portray me as evil when the Prince of Peace is to do the same thing. Peace - that is such a joke. There hasn't been peace on this earth since Cain and Abel - and never will be! Yeah, it would be nice if one day soon - someone could say - "OK - all people - put down your weapons - there is peace on earth from today on" and it "happens". NEVER .... that is such wishful thinking. Any smart religious person knows we'll not see Peace any time soon. As many churches as there are, bibles, korans, etc - supposedly teaching Peace and Love - for all these centuries - did ya ever take notice - it isn't happening? It just doesn't work that way. I don't care how many cops, preachers, priests, nuns, etc - you have - there will be NO peace. The shit is worse now than ever. Some may say the end of the world - so be it. But when each of us die, it's always the "end of the world" that dying person's world - so who's to say it is "THE" end of "EARTH"? Where "all" mankind dies at once or there abouts. Where ALL things cease to exist - including troubles? The only way this world will end is when our resources run out, the sun goes black, we nuke each other to death so the clouds do suffocate the earth from all living conditions.

See, this is where YOU TOO are flawed - They want US to practice THEIR religion - or else. THEY HATE CHRISTIANS, JEWS and I can't recall the last one. SO - they've included ALL but themselves. How convenient. And they're "peaceful"? PEACEFUL - MY ASS. Christians are also out there pounding the pavement to shove religion down people's throats. So, it could be deemed yet another "religious" war. You bible carriers always switch to a bible when things don't go your way. Those versuses from days gone by aren't going to save your ass should they come knocking.

The "Gulf war" as you said, had absolutely nothing to do with 9/11. I'll agree with you there. That was a whole different story. However - HAD they allowed the General in charge to finish the job, THIS Iraq war may not be happening.

>> I doubt you know enought about your religion to call Islam flawed.

I never pretended, admitted to or claimed to be a "religious" finatic or "follower" if you will. Not of "Christianity", Buddhism (sp?), any others and CERTAINLY not "Islam". But - I DO know what I've seen and heard with my own ears and eyes. Those pricks want all who do NOT follow Islam - to die. They are NOT practicing a "peaceful" religion as much as they'd love to think. So, if you think Islam is so great - why don't YOU go to Afghanistan and join OBL and take what comes to you. You "seem" to support it in defending it.

>> I suppose you feel that way against the German's, Japanese, British, >> Native American's and others who have killed far more Americans than were >> killed in 9/11.

Eh - I think your history is a bit fucked up. It is the people who came to America - who KILLED the "Native" Americans. WE essentially took their land off them and in the end - they have like maybe a millionth of what they once owned. I'm not proud of that - but THAT is history!

As to the other wars - were it not for a nut case like Hitler - just as Saddam and the Japanese leader whose name I've forgotten - those wars may never have been fought. Never did "I" say I agreed with them. BUT since they were started - those fruit cakes had to be stopped. THEY alone are responsible for the loss of innocent lives. ANYONE who "starts" a war - wears the blood. Now, as for THIS Iraq war - I have in past posts and shall in this one - DETEST it. I didn't agree with it then nor do I now. BUT - I DO AND WILL support our troops. They're doing what they are sent to do - even if "they" don't agree with it. OBL and that dick head from N. Korea are the two latest nuts that need dealt with. NOT so much the people - but the assholes that are convincing them. What I DID agree to - is going to Afghanistan to find OBL and deliver his cold dead sorry ass on a silver stretcher. BUT Bush lost track of that and went wondering on to Iraq. We should have devoted ALL resources to finish that first job. Had we done that - OBL and his dick sucking buds might all be dead now - and with no leader with "money" - maybe the other "rag heads" would stop their fateful dreaming.

>>> Dude - I DO think - every fucking day about those 3000 + killed.
>>
>> And they think about the tens of thousands who hve died at the hand of >> American arms.

They died because others were attacked first and we stuck our nose in to defend those being attacked - in whatever manner. REMEMBER - we even helped Iraq at one time - against Iran. Strange - how we now battle in Iraq AND in the U.N. at least for now - with their foe as well - Iran. THAT is our problem - we ALWAYS stick our nose in. Those assholes in that area have been fighting for CENTURIES. WHO the hell are WE to think WE will stop it in a couple years? It ain't never going to happen. PEACE in the middle east is a wild dream at best.

At one point WE even armed the Taliban......... We essentially fought Russian equipped armies via the Taliban. We get bit in the ass every damned time we help ANYONE. We need to let them fight it out - kill each other off if it makes them happy. THEN mop up when they start looking in our direction. IF they want to commit genocide in that area - far be it from me to stop them OR care. There's nothing we're going to do to stop it with absolute certainty. I'm not totally heartless - I DO feel for the kids and women. IF they could be removed, I'd say do it and let those assholes have at it.

Furthermore - EVERY country - who has capabilities to make arms - SELLS them. SO, be it the U.S., Russia, N. Korea, whoever........... it is not necessarily the "maker" of those bombs who is "responsible" for the innocent lives being taken. Just because YOU buy a gun from Smith and Wesson - doesn't make THEM guilty for your committing murder. THAT analogy you used is a bit off based.......... IF Israel bombs the shit out of Palestine, it's not OUR fault they used stuff they bought from us! WE didn't "pull" the trigger. Does it make it right? NO - but that is a fact of life.

There is none! That is the problem. He quotes them pretty easily - probably reading word for word - but himself doesn't know the significance. He blasts ME for blasting "Islam" - hahahahaha ROFLMAO.

The Bible itself - from that which I do know and had preached to me - has ALWAYS alluded to war in many areas. So - that "history" book is telling us that THOSE people have been at it forever and WE are not going to stop it. You would "think" that over all those centuries, someone - one of their many leaders - would have said enough is enough. Even if they "get" one - the poor bastard is assassinated - further proving peace is not desired. They don't want "us" interfering. So, let them go on - we can watch via CNN - ring side seats.

Maybe the "true" Islam is peaceful - but "I" speak of the <perhaps twisted version of> "Islam" being preached by these murderous PRICKS. Where NO ONE but them - should exist. IF that isn't a bunch of psychos, I don't know what is.

Infidels are we? OK......... I've stated my title for them before and will do so again - Cock sucking yellow bellied rag head bastards. They hate those who don't follow the Koran or at least their "twisted" version of it? OK - how's this - shove the Koran up your ass. Go ahead and hate me - who gives a shit? IF I cared, I sure in hell wouldn't be defaming those ass holes. You never see them with women, and they look like they've never bathed in like their life time. So, yeah, I think I have them pegged pretty close.

Regardless what is happening today - they "still" show - that they prefer "civilian" targets over "military" targets. Buses, market places, weddings, etc. SO - it is easy to see they are truly YELLOW. Have I "offended" anyone yet? If you're "innocent" - then this doesn't pertain to you. If you're among the supporters of those murderous pricks - then may you be next to get what they have coming.

The Christian bible is far bloodier than the Koran and a reference was made to a single similar verse in the Koran.

What's a "cirut?" You are so stupid, Markie, anybody can see why you can't pass the General theory exam.
I can bet you didn't pass the no code tech until about after 20 times of trying to pass it.

You know - I had a very strange experience today. I had a bunch of donkey shit - quotes from the "Koran" -sent to me by someone "supposedly" writing from the "Whitehouse". I wrote to the "Contact" address of the White House to let them know that "IF" it DID come from that "employee" that they need checked into and I DETEST  having "religious" views shoved down my throat.
I've not heard back - yet. The address "of course" - looked legit. It closely matched the one I got from the web FOR the Whitehouse. I "doubt" that was a legit address to start with - but if it was - then that writer had NO right to cast her views on me. ALSO - she had NO right to use an "official" address as it be (if it were so) - to do so. It is not for the Government to push religion.

I don't give a shit if they reply or not. My main concern is "maybe" a virus being started as there "appeared" to be some links which I didn't click on.
I wanted them to know that "just in case".  The whole thing stunk.

Oh and as for the "Koran" being less violent than the Bible - Ah.......... then WHY is OBL and his "fairy" band of cock sucking followers vowing that ALL Christians, Jews, etc. SHOULD DIE if not following ISLAM who "uses" the "KORAN"? STUFF THE KORAN UP YOUR ASS.

Hi folks, new here.

I have been in need of a weather radio, but when shopping for one this week it seemed such a waste to receive only 7 frequencies when I could be receiving thousands. So I ended up with a scanner, just like that.

Wow! Instant hobby! Big mistake! I'm a serial compulsive, so now it's time to start making antennas...

The scanner is one of those closeout RS Pro-2052s. With the stock antenna I can receive the local police at around 39 and some frequencies in the 100s, around 125 and 150, including civilian air. Maybe more, but I'll concentrate on these for now.

Would like to build a simple half-wave dipole to start with. In my garage I have a roll of 10ga solid copper, some solid aluminum wire maybe twice as thick (don't know what it is, is left over from a satellite TV system), and some galvanized 1-inch steel pipe.

Antenna would be mounted inside a detached garage so weather/weight are not significant factors.

Reading the archives I can't tell whether to go with the copper because it is a better conductor than the others, with the aluminum because it is thicker than the copper, or with the galv pipe because it is much thicker than the copper though somewhat lossy.

Any thoughts appreciated.

Thank you,
Paul

was of them all if its inside make a dipole out of coax.

however.
i'd use the ally meself, you wont get a better sig with copper it would be wasted and weather badly
CSA does not really play much of a role in RX only aerials

I'll agree with you 100%. I have a Tech license and enjoy the hobby very much. I plan on upgrading to General once the code issue is settled. I have always heard that "If you don't use it, you lose it". I have no interest in the code so why should I not be allowed to enjoy Ham radio. BTW, my CB license years back was KLW4194..

I wish someone would please explain why WTC 7 came crashing down at 6 p.m. when nothing even hit that building? What did owner Larry Silverstein mean by, "pull it" just before it collapsed?

Do your own research instead of believing everything the controlled news media and our worthless elected officials tell us. Type "WTC 7" into a search engine and get educated on the subject instead of chastising others.

Make a Half - wave vertical with pipe. If the wall is dry wood, you can simply clamp it in place on the wall. You figure out the length of this antenna by the following formula

468 / freq (in MHZ)

Hook the center conductor of the coax to the antenna, and then simply run a wire from the shield braid of the coax to a nearby ground. Presto. You now have a half - wave vertical.

A l;ittle note on dipoles. the bands you want to listen to are primarily vertical in nature. so if you made a diplole, you would want to mount the thing vertically, not horizontally. The side of the diplole with the center conductor connection would go at the top.

the sides of this antenna can be figured out by the following formula

234 / freq (in MHZ)

this gives you one side of the dipole. shield to one side, center conductor to the other. I would use the copper wire for this.

Another antenna is the loop. the entire length of this antenna is figured out by the following

1005 / freq (in MHZ)

this is a loop of wire, and is usually tacked onto the wall. the hookup is made at the side of the loop for vertical polarization. Once again, the copper wire is best suited for this antenna. the only trouble with this antenna is that it is slightly directional, recieving best at a 90 degree angle to the plane of the loop in both directions. The loop is usually formed into a circle or a square on the wall. (square is the usual case).

naturally, this mounting info is based on an indoor environment, outside mountings need to be dealt with a bit differently. also, we are assumiong that the building does not have metal siding, which will tend to block radio waves. These do make excellent attic mounted antennas in the house, by the way. Just mount the antenna on the end wall of the attic, straight up. If you feel you must insulate the antenna, then electric fence insulators are a quick and easy way to do this. simply tap the nails into a convenient stud to mount the antenna. The half wave vertical can also be made from the copper wire, by the way, and it will work well. The half wave does not require radials , by the way. That is why we simply run a ground wire from the braid to ground on this antenna.

for the coax connection points, a piece of thick plexiglass makes a good terminal block. just drill a couple holes in the block, close together, and put an extra washer and nut on the screws. walla ! you have a place to hook the wires up. Screw spacing ? 1/2 inch or so works pretty well....

I wish it would keep all you "non antenna related" goofballs out of the antenna newsgroup. Why don't you all get some kind of life on a group that pertains to stuff like that. IE: misc..

That's why you'll never be an asset to the ham radio service. You're too

The end impedance of a half wave antenna is in the neighborhood of 1000-->5000 Ohms depending on the diameter of the conductor; fatter conductors, lower Z.

Connecting a coaxial cable to the bottom end of a half wave element and the shield to ground will then result in a V.S.W.R. of roughly 2500/50 or 500:1. You need to convert the feed Z to 5o Ohms either by:

1. A quarter wave stub as in the popular J antenna
2. A lumped element L or Pi network

The END impedance is not where you are making your connection. The impedance at the connection point on a half wave vertical is about 30 to 35 ohms. Not a perfect match , but certainly not 500 to 1 !.

They didnt "convert" it when i ran a half wave whip on my car , and the shield was grounded to the chassis. I ran this for 15 years and never had an swr of over 1.5. My 40 meter vertical outside doesnt have an swr of 500, either, and it has worked well over the last 20 years. No stub matching is required in either case. Better tell this to the thousands of hams that have been running these antennas for the last 50 years ! No antenna matcher is needed, either (your lumped L or pi network). The formulas and the antenna itself came right out of the arrl handbook.

So, you're telling me you have a 66' tall 40M vertical that is fed directly with coax?
I would appreciate a model of the antenna in EZNEC or ELNEC or AO. In addition, the reference and year of the Handbook or any professional journal where it describes end feeding a half wave antenna directly with coaxial cable.

Just what makes a person an "asset to the ham radio service"? That sounds just as stupid as an "asset to the telephone service". Like it or not, ham radio is just a means of communication that has world-wide reach. Listen up, the "ham radio service" isn't some illustrious organization. It's just a means for people around to world to chat live. It can have great value in some emergencies, but most of it's use is idle chatter.

Yes, I do have a 66 foot vertical, that is suspended from about an 80 foot tree out here, and i have been using it for a very long time. And the mobil antenna is still on the old truck, also. Out here in the country, they dont care what you put up for antennas. I also have a horizontal loop antenna out there that is 150 feet on each side.

If you are so convinced that it doesnt work, then try it out. Its just that simple. Put a three foot one up in the attic, as i described, and see if it "fails to work".on the 155 mhz police band. Out here, we dont use EZNEC. We just put 'em up, tune 'em, and use 'em. The antennas I dexcribed here are well known to any novice operator (back when you had to know something about it). The half - wave vertical is problably one of the oldest antennas on the ham bands. It's not some "new idea" that i dreamed up..........

Please stop being an asshole.

One Liberty Plaza was also thought to be in imminent danger of collapse, but the foundation was not found to be as badly damaged by the impact of two 1400 foot buildings collapsing as was 7 WTC

Now crawl back into your hole.

It's a mechanical decision, mostly. The antenna has to be 1/2 wavelength long (and vertical) for best reception, so consider that when you decide what to use.

My personal decision would be a ground plane, not a dipole. Radials (the horizontal elements) about 75" each (for the 39 MHz signals) and a few vertical elements - one 75" long, one about 26" long for the aircraft band and another about 19" long for the 150-160 MHz range.
(You can add as many as you like - the only constraint is mechanical - how do you do it?)

Same reason Catholics killed Protestants and Protestants killed Catholics in the Hundred Years' War?

Same Reason Christians tried to eliminate all non-Christians in Armenia in the early part of the last century?

On the whole there's a larger percentage of bloodthirsty-against-not-us Christians than there is in any other religion.

BTW, the only part of Islam that follows the tenets that OBL does, as far as killing all infidels, is the Wahabi sect, which is as much a part of mainstream Islam as Santoria is part of mainstream Christianity. When's the last time they killed a goat on the altar at St. Pat's?

"Make a half wave vertical and simply run a wire to the nearest ground and presto", you have a very high impedance antenna that will not match to 50 ohms and is very bad advice. Make it a quarter wavelength vertical radiator and ground the coax to something substantial, that would be better advice. On the half wave dipole, it doesn�t matter if the element connected to the center of the coax points up or down, the antenna doesn�t know any different and it works the same.

Ladies and gentlemen, here is a perfect example of CB mentality that has plagued the radio hobby from the beginning. Someone here obviously doesn�t understand the fundamental nature of antennas but preaches bogus information as it was gospel. Maybe the half wavelength mobile antenna with the perfect match he refers to is his fiberglass loaded CB antenna, which is advertised in half, full, one and a half, and every combination of silly lengths to please CBrs as the dealers take their money. They do match ok, but are not the full length, end fed, very high impedance half wave antenna that he originally described in this thread. If you actually read the ARRL handbook you will see Mr. Wolf�s grievous mistakes.

Aah! A voice of reason. I well remember the CB ads re 1/2 wave and full wave antennas. As far as I could tell, the only thing half wave was maybe the overall length of wire if it were unwound and stretched out straight.

"I" haven't mentioned - that Christianity was or wasn't a cause of wars - I called the bible a "history" book. It DOES speak of wars. Hell, even when Christ supposedly was taken, there was upheaval. MY point wasn't with all that crap - mine was "strictly" dealing with the "Koran" which Mike seems to be pushing and my disgust with it and the cock sucker currently using it for his excuse to murder. The one "responsible" for bringing the towers down.

The one responsible for the towers will most likely be judged by history to be a Christian.

Mike is pushing nothing. Mike is pointing out that you have a sound bite education and that you know nothing of mainstream Islam.

There are places called libraries and they have things called books. But they take more than 30 seconds to read.

The bible is a very poor history book. Even in cases where a story tells of towns that existed at some point in time as in the Exodus, they frequently did not exist within hundreds of years of each other.
As for the major people in the stories, if they existed they had neither the might or power that was described.

mike, i would use an antenna switcher, use both radios on one antenna, you don't want rf going to the scanner from the ham rig anyways, bad weather? as said before, switch to a n indoor antenna and be safe

While that is true in your country, it is not yet true here. The international conference simply left it up to each individual country as to whether or not to require it.

Be an idiot. Post of topic. Make wild outlandish statements. Say you want to kill a public official. Call someone an idiot when we all know he isn't.
Follow all the other ways that people post in this group.
You will then get answered

For those in the Durham Region, Ontario, Canada area, I have updated the frequency lists. I have also re-designed the site a bit. I hope it looks more "communicationish" then it did before.

I should have the county frequeny lists for areas east and north of Durham Region done later today.

I can't answer the "last" question with certainty but I am willing to bet in some eyes, it will be "Bush". And in saying that, "I" am "NOT" blaming him.
It just seems like the President of the day always takes the heat.

As to the remark of the one bringing them down - deemed a "Christian"? THAT IS FUNNY........... though you may be right! History will bear it out one way or another.

Further - I heard this AM, the Pope apologized to the MOOSELEMS - apparently for talking crap on them (deservedly so - in my book). They didn't deserve an apology. Also, the news was that they killed a nun and others. So they've proven themselves once again. They can't pick on someone prepared to kick their ass. THEY'RE YELLOW BELLIED PUSSIES. The same shit I've been saying - they're a bunch of murdering cock suckers who wants all to bow down to them.
I heard that somewhere in the Koran - that it is written that all "infidels" will convert to ISLAM "or" die by the sword. And that is a "peaceful religion"? MY ASS.....
I STILL say - they can KISS MY ASS. Stick the Koran/Quaran or however you spell - it up your ass. It is no more peace preaching than the Bible. With all the Priests, preachers, ministers, nuns, etc. - if there was to be peace, there would be with all the preaching going on. Same with the rest -
NO ONE CARES. Then this band of merry cocksucking murderers comes along and says we must convert....... THAT IS HILARIOUS. DREAM ON - DICK HEADS

I'll be an infidel as long as they're sucking each others cocks - including their donkeys, camels, and other animals cocks as well. THAT is what I think of them. I'm not afraid, they can only kill me once. Ya got to go sometime!

????????? Looks like my old pal (a troublemaker) is up to it again. Using my business name to make trouble. I posted an ad in a group which we had an issue in a while back. I guess he used it. I know he was good for hacking.
"Sorry" for the intrusion..........

"10 Meter Amateur Radio Band Coverage (26-30MHz)"

Prima Facie Illegal.  They can't be sold IN the United States, or TO the united States.

Next time you want to talk about the law, read it first - you'll look less foolish and less crooked.

Not all of those statements are always true. As fond as I am of manual transmissions, sometimes automatics have the advantage. A hydraulic torque converter with a manually controlled "automatic" transmission is better at drag racing than a manual gearbox under many conditions.

This is less true under road race conditions where the lower torque needed to be handled by the transmission allows the newer style "manual" transmissions to change gears in milliseconds. The secret is 2 transmissions, one for the odd gears, one for the even, and 2 clutches, you are literally in 2 gears at the same time for a short period of time. Takes a lot of computer control. That's one way to do it, there are others.

The landscape is very blurred nowadays concerning what is a manual and what is an automatic transmission, with "manuals" in modern race cars being more automatic than "automatics" in non-race cars.

And the state of CW vs digital is about the same. Except CW can always be beat if your PC works. You just need to select the correct mode.

That last statement is a fallacy. The digital modes are wiped out by conditions that will still permit CW to be used. Even SSB can sometimes be used when conditions wipe out the digital. I have repeatedly said and now I am emphasizing: EVERY MODE HAS ITS UNIQUE ADVANTAGES AND UNIQUE DISADVANTAGES. It seems that people wish to deny that whatever mode they don't want to deal with has any advantages whatsoever. They also wish to attribute magic properties to whatever is their favorite mode. Both points of view are foolish.

Wrong. There are digital modes that handle every distortion type that exists. You just have to pick the correct one.

Name them.  I've not found any one mode that can handle all conditions of distortion.  However, I have found from time to time that distortion can be severe enough at times to wipe out all digital modes even if you try to switch from mode to mode.  Occasionally it can wipe out CW.

I repeat:  EVERY MODE HAS ITS ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES.  To deny that is foolish.

Everyone keeps ignoring that I maintain that: EVERY MODE HAS ITS ADVANTAGES

AND DISADVANTAGES. I keep repeating this but no one cares to acknowledge such a plain and simple fact. Why is that? Are you all so set on bashing what you don't like? Are you all so set on trying to prove that your favorite mode, whatever it may be, is the best?

Unless Pactor II has recently been put into the public domain, it requires buying proprietary hardware to run it instead of using a simple inexpensive sound card interface with commonly available software. Most hams are not thrilled with the idea of proprietary hardware and data modes.

"Pretty much" is not the same as "always".  You are hedging your statement.
Either it does or it doesn't.

Each tower had 40 huge steel columns running up the centre. If the booms you can hear during the collapse were the floors hitting each other and not demolition charges why were these steel columns not left standing but found at the debris pile in uniform 30 foot lengths? Why weren't those columns standing after the floors had suposedly 'slid down' around them?

Here's one of the columns:

Every brand of vehicle has its advantages and disadvantages but I don't see the government forcing anyone to buy a Chevrolet. What is wrong with a free market of modes?
Nobody is forcing anyone not to use CW.

I didn't mean to imply that there is a single mode that will handle all types of distortion, just that there are specific modes available that handle each type. And somethimes absolutely no digital mode or CW can get through, but that circumstance happens less often as time goes on, the exception being CW's cacpbilities aren't changing.

Your shouted statement is correct.

Hi Dave,

I've seen you refer to service vs hobby a number of times in this thread. As a noob here, could you explain this? What do you mean by 'service'? Getting on, talking to others...communicating with others seems more of a hobby to me.

Can you explain the service aspects of ham radio that you are referring to....can you define for me 'service' and why amateur radio is a service to you rather than a hobby?

Thanks in advance,

noonespecial

From Webster's: "service - an administrative division of government" In the USA, that means a service TO the citizens BY the government. The service comes from the government, not from the citizens.

All throughout Title 47 Code of Federal Regulations, the word "service" is used as the type and kind of radio being regulated. It is a regulatory term in that context. One can write the FCC and get that information.

All too often, amateurs who think too much of themselves try to use "service" as equivalent to some (undefined) "national service" such as being a part of the military or a government position. :-)

Part 95 describes Citizens Band Radio SERVICE and the Radio Control Radio SERVICE. :-)

Forgive the top posting

I was requested to define "Amateur Service" ... what service?

"47 CFR 97.3 Definitions:

(a) Definitions of terms used in Part 97 are:

(1) Amateur operator ... redacted
(2) Amateur radio Services ... redacted
(3) Amateur Satellite Service ... redacted
(4) Amateur Service. A radio communication for the purpose of self training, intercommunication and technical investigations carries out by amateurs, that is, duly authorized persons interested in the radio technique solely with a personal aim and without pecuniary interest."

Definitions [a][5] through [a][46] and section [b] in it's entirety have been excluded.

There are three elements of the amateur service: 1) 'self training' in any and all aspects of electro-magnetic radio telecommunication [notice this is listed first]; 2) 'intercommunication' includes talking, satellite techniques, television techniques [yes, amateurs can design and operate wideband tv], microwave techniques, digital techniques, spread spectrum techniques, CW, AM, SSB, FM, etc.; 3) 'technical investigations' include propagation studies at HF, VHF, UHF and microwave, EME activities, antenna developments, new modulation modes [particularly in digital communications], error correction techniques in digital communication, bandwidth compression techniques, and any number of Physics and Electronic areas of investigation.

Amateur [non financially compensated] radio is much more than buying a box and using it to just talk with someone. IMO, it is a service wherein the amateur, a duly authorized person, is committed to self training [education] in some components of the electromagnetic radio communication arts and sciences.

"Duly Authorized" requires authorization by competent authority after a demonstration of some related skill or knowledge by the person seeking to be 'duly authorized'. If a demonstrable skill level is NOT required then "Duly Authorized' does not make sense.

If you just want to talk, the 11 meter band or the FRS will meet your needs.

/s/ DD [AKA Dave]

That's a picture of something but please give us the pictures and information on a "debris pile in uniform 30 foot lengths"

As for the "huge steel columns"
"The unique structure of the WTC towers exaggerated the problems caused by the weakened steel. The towers had a lightweight "perimeter tube" design consisting of 244 exterior columns of 36 cm square steel box section on 100 cm centers, with 95% of the structure's interior consisting of nothing but air   Within this perimeter tube design there was a 27m by 40m core, designed to provide additional support to the tower."

I don't consider 36 cm (less than 15 inches) huge in that context.

You're welcome, My pleasure.

There's nothing like the sound of a good loud fart or belch on CB channel 19 to get the conversations going especially when they're broadcast over-modulated with echo and punctuated with a roger beep.

That would make you virtually unique on the Citizen's Band.

One of the reasons for the desirability of the classic 148GTL Sideband was the ability to crank up the output power and modulation depth by simply opening up a couple of pots.

Though this was not the official position of Cobra, I remember sitting in the service department when one of the techs told caller after caller how to make this adjustment.

Many that left the building for the personal use of staff had also been so adjusted.

Then again, the chief engineer had a Galaxy (complete with roger beep and reverb) with about 100 watts connected to a yagi on the roof at Cortland St, so liberties with the regs were not uncommon at Cobra.

Later models have been revised so such power adjustments were not simple to make.

The above band operation is new to me. Although I did work with someone, some years ago, who had modified an old Midland to work above the band, fiercely arguing her right to do so.

There was a crackdown in St Louis that year, and it was sternly explained unto her that she had been misinformed.

I learned sufficient code to gain my upgrade to General in 2005 and passed the written test the same evening. I have no interest in using code further.
I may change my mind on that later, but given my advanced years, the point may be moot. My primary interest as a Ham is in fiddling with antennas, only one of the 11 antennas scattered about my 7 acres was purchased. There are 5 at my detached shop/shack and 6 more back at the house to use when I desire air conditioning while pursuing my hobby. Three of these are indoor dipoles for use when bad weather threatens, as it often does here in southern Oklahoma. I hope all you other gentlemen continue to enjoy the access to the Amateur Bands allowed by what ever license class you possess.

Why not?  Picking what you want to use isn't okay?  You don't want alternatives to CW.  Or alternatives to digital?  Or , for that matter, alternatives to voice modes.

So for you choice is bad?

I should have said "4WD" instead of "Chevrolet".

Different brands of cars are not dissimilar enough to compare to different types of modes so the analogy doesn't work.  The different brands of cars (Chevy, Ford, Chrysler, etc) are more like comparing a Bencher paddle to an MFJ paddle to a Kent paddle, etc.  If you use CW, you pick your own type of paddle.  If you drive, you pick your own type of car.

I'm sure that drivers licenses applicants can learn to use buggy whips on their horseless carriages, but should they be required to?

learn to use a buggy whip to good effect on and horseless carage Idon't think so I felt like taking a whip to mine the last time it ran out of gas nothing would happened Buggy whip are abolslutely useless wth horseless carrages expect I supose to get better service at the gas station

Only if the buggy whip conveys useful information to the "horseless carrage" as it did in the case of the horse.

As CW still conveys information as it did in the beginnings of radio the anology does not hold water...

nope it does not convey information as it did in the begining of radio in the begining it conveyed data other radio radio services as well as the ars today it does not

We could probably modify vehicles to respond to lashes from a buggy whip and eliminate the accelerator.

No, but it darned sure wouldn't hurt to make sure they could drive something with a standard transmission. Never know when the ol' grind-o-crunch automatic is gonna give out and ya has to use something more reliable.

Well, I don't know KB9RQZ - but I'll say thay he's entitled to have and express his opinions, same as you and I, whether you or I agree with him or not.

Y'all try to stay away from the ad hominem stuff now - it never convinces anybody of anything. Just pisses 'em off.

I will correct you the ad hominem stuff does often convince peole (botht the targets and the audence) that hthe attacker lacks any real point to make

I took the code test (novice 5WPM) back in 73 in high school, and had the totally worthless (to me) Novice ticket for 2 years or whatever it was. I spent a lot of time practicing CW, back then and also about 10 years ago, and can't seem to get past 7-8WPM, so I gave up on it, the sound of it annoys me anyway. It wasn't worth the stress it caused me to work HF. of course, since I DID pass the 5WPM test, I can be a general now. But, the interest has passed. I have a 2M mobile and an HT, but if I buy an HF rig, it's going to be to listen, but not to other hams, that's as boring as it gets. If I want to hear about hip replacements, and stuff like that, I can visit the folks at the assisted living place my mom's in.

I don't care about HF anymore, the code requirement outlasted my interest in HF. I wanted to be on HF from the time I was a little kid to about age 40 or so. No longer. I have my other hobbies now, guns, PCs, home theater, and dogs. Not much time or budget left for ham radio.

Just because you and I were forced to learn it does it mean a new ham should. It's an obsolete mode in most respects, handy in a certain type of emergency, but of little other use, except communicating with other people using it. Nobody's stopping them. Nobody should have to learn it either.

But it's funny, the people I hear, both on HF and 2M and 440 causing all the real problems are people who didn't get a no code license, supposedly don't have a "CB mentality", yet do many of the things you can hear on 11 meters all the time, keying up on top of other hams, harassing hams, ignoring calls, etc, based on their call sign timeframe (Thinking if the ham was ticketed after xx-xx-1990 or whatever, they are a "hamster", etc). Seems like the code makes you this way, or maybe getting old does.

I would gladly take the "CB mentality" over the stuff the so-called "good hams" pull.

BDK

Not really...

He does have administrator access to PHPBB itself, but the popups are either in the html or part of the template, which he cannot edit (no ftp access)

The pop-ups are just a way for the host to make money, the users cannot remove them....

Anyway, anybody with a bit of common sense would just install a pop-up blocker and leave it at that..

Im using google pop-up blocker and I didn't even see any until you mentioned it...

Planes flew into the buildings and the top floors fell in mass on the floor below it.
That floor collapesed and the mas fell on the floor below it.

I once watched a friend of mine break a stack of roofing tiles that was over six feet tall with his bare hand. While he did it in one continuos motion, he still broke only one brick at a time.

KE = 1/2 MV^2 says that once that top mass fell more than a single floor, the building was going to come down, one floor at a time.

As for any inane ideas about wiring the floors with explosives one question must be asked.
Why bother with planes and only two buildings when you could wire hundreds and set them off when discovered or on a weekly basis?

Motorola type II is an analog system. While some channels may be digital, the system isn't, and there are definitely some analog channels in there.

Boca Raton fire is digital and 8 channels of Palm Beach County Sheriff are digital, but the rest are probably analog.

Ken, if you hear any talkgroups that aren't shown in the list with an A for the mode (or those services that aren't listed with modes because no one posted modes to the site), please post the talkgroups that are analog, so that the moderators can add the information to the database.

The person running a phpBB can edit anything in the entire BB he wants
- I know, I run one - and I've edited it extensively.

Bull cookies. There's nothing in phpBB that can't be edited.

Would you have 1000 people learn to drive a standard transmission even though only one person out of those 1000 people benefits from it? The cost/benefit ratio is extremely high.

(I'll go ya one better - make EVERYBODY drive a standard - or a Harley - and save some oil. Outlaw automatics!)

Ok then - same goes for satellite communications, fast/slow scan television, packet, EME, and so on. Lots of applicants will never use those modes, but the questions are on the test, so you better learn the material.

K2FRD (I think) proposed what I thought was the best solution to the Morse code issue - keep it as part of the test, but don't keep it as a show-stopper. I think it would be fair, at least for the higher grade licenses, to throw it in there with all the other modes you may never use.... have it on the test, let the applicant earn some points from it if they can, but don't send 'em home disappointed if they don't.

Someone skilled in driving a vehicle with a manual transmission and actually using it can reap a number of performance benefits. These include improved gas mileage, better passing performance, better performance in hilly terrain, etc. If people were required to learn how to drive vehicles with manual transmissions, more of them might actually choose to drive such vehicles.

I would agree with this on premise. Its a fair statement and presented in a manner that indicates a reaction to this event not unlike that felt by many.
The circumstances of the incident are horrific and difficult to deal with for ANY "man in the street".
Its one thing to have questions. Its another to accept blindly as fact, some "theory" put out here that defies all logic, by individuals with an obvious political agenda.
The ultimate blame for 9-11 will no doubt be in question for eternity. The actual circumstances that brought down the buildings however is obvious to anyone without an agenda and possessing normal powers of observation and needs no further comment really.
This having been said, it is obvious as well that those believing the conspiracies are most likely not going to change their opinion since the core logic for that opinion is based on logic outside the realm of normal reason.

Try as I might, my V6 won't respond to the buggy whip. Kind of like my

I accept nothing regarding this matter as fact. IMHO there is a collection of ignorance and wishful thinking on both sides of the issue. IMHO, there are many who are attempting to use the events or to bend the truth to justify beliefs and conclusions that were held long before it happened. There is also no doubt that there is intentional opportunism, obfuscation, concealment, public thought manipulation and downright lying, from both sides of the debate. I do think it is good that the untruths are being questioned. I do think it was a crime that the investigation was manipulated and the forensic and other evidence was hidden and destroyed.

Absolutely not. It doesn't matter if they want to ride a bicycle or not. Simply knowing how to ride a bicycle would be good for them. And if they discovered they liked it enough to actually ride a bicycle, it would not only benefit them but also benefit the environment.

Cecil, bicycles (and most motorcycles) need smooth roadways; it is hard to operate "CW" while mobile and off-road on a bike.

Now HORSEBACK mobile is the same on-road or off-road. No gasoline or oil needed nor "gear shifting." Horses can make "new models" all by themselves, keep themselves "powered up" without the aid of stations like Exxon, 76, Shell, or Sinclair. The US Army even had a 'horse mobile' radio set (1943) to talk while the troop was on the move. :-)

Everybody ought to learn to "sit" a horse and guide it. :-)

Dee seems to have little experience in long-haul driving, or even short-haul automotive transport. I learned to drive in a '39 Ford sedan. The first three autos I owned were manual trans, a Plymouth two-door (came out west in it), a '53 Austin-Healey roadster (manual trans went kaput while downshifting on a freeway off-ramp back in '60), and a Brit very compact station wagon. A whole lotta NONSENSE to do the clutch-gearshift thing on all those manual transmission vehicles even if it was easy for me. NO "performance increase" whatsoever of manual versus automatic.

Buying a new 2005 Chevy Malibu MAXX with its better engine system computer allowed us to get 32.7 MPG (based on both fuel tank filling receipts AND the Driver Information Center display of MPG) for a 1,900 mile round trip up to Washington state and back in July this year. That's without using the Cruise Control (which my wife likes but I don't, driving over 90% of the time). About 2 1/2 MPG better than the Chevy Cavalier wagon for the same distance the year before. MAXX had done almost as good MPG in September last year on a much longer distance to Wisconsin, again doing about 2 1/2 MPG better than the Cavalier over the same route the year before that.

The engine computers keep getting better and better, some even compensating for the bad habits of some drivers using the almost-universal automatic. Why anyone would prefer using a manual or automatic in stop-and-go city traffic can be summed up as RATIONALIZATION or braggadoccio by manual trans owners. Besides, operating "CW" in stop-and-go city traffic will seriously cut down one's morsemanship speed with a manual trans. Unless one has a third hand... :-)

Cell phone coverage is growing, growing, growing. My wife used the cell for all kinds of calls while we were moving in MAXX through several states, even checking her e-mail on AOL! Without any skill at morsemanship whatsoever, she "worked" her sister in WA state from the parking lot of a restaurant in Amana, IA, using the cell phone. :-) Hmmmm. One out of three Americans has a cell phone now. Yet, Blowcode contends "everyone has to learn" morsemanship to have a backup skill in comms? :-)

You are absolutely right! Why didn't I think of that? One caveat, however - they'll also have to pass a Morse code test with their bicycle horn. (I forget now - is this so they can drive a car or use the microwave oven?) This is too silly.

Even if spelled correctly [you're, not your] Fred is definitely NOT saying his thing with civility. :-)

Freddie, Mark was saying that - IN THE BEGINNING - ALL radio services used morse code...and the first US radio regulating agency wanted all to show competency in this common mode so that the agency to communicate with all users. That era has long since passed into oblivion. Just ain't no other radio services using manual morse code for communications now.

They should if they want to be good back seat drivers.

It appears you only have to cause one floor to drop in that type of building to bring it down. On the History Channel they have a program called Engineering Disasters, and in one of the shows they addressed that very issue. They had actual films of a building that fell during construction in just the way the WTC fell. After much testing they found that rebar had been placed 1/2 inch off from where it was supposed to be in the floor. As the building got taller there was enough weight placed on a lower floor and it failed. The building went straight down, just like the WTC, killing a bunch of workers. All this because of some rebar in the wrong place.

Sounds like (more or less) they're describing the pancaking of L'Ambiance Plaza in Bridgeport, Ct., back in (clickety click) 1987

short version: the building was a "lift slab" structure, where the floors were built up at ground level, then lifted by crane to their destination height, and attached to the columns. First would be the top floor, then (top -1), (top -2), rinse, lather, repeat.

One of the upper floors came loose, fell down, and the rest joined up.

A couple of cites:
http://www.pubs.asce.org/WWWdisplay.cgi?9204513

http://www.fire.nist.gov/bfrlpubs/build94/PDF/b94023.pdf   (pdf)

and, for good measure:

http://911research.wtc7.net/wtc/analysis/compare/lambiance.html

(note that the last includes some commentary which is full of [expletive deleted], such as the claim that "The rubble of the L'Ambiance Plaza building contained clearly recognizable stacks of floor slabs, contrasting with the striking absence of a single photograph showing a piece of floor slab or even steel truss at Ground Zero...)

Great links, thanks.  I do think the building they had on the film was in Florida, but I seem to remember them saying the name L'Ambiance Plaza  when talking about other building that had fallen.  There was a guy doing a video tape during the construction so you got to see it come down.

Although it is hard to tell from the photos shown, it sure looks like there were pieces of floor slab in some of them.

Nothing had to melt, just get hot enough to lose strength and yield.
With steel, this occurs well below the melting point.  Hasn't anyone ever watched a blacksmith at work?

The following letter was sent today by Kevin Ryan of Underwriters Laboratories to Frank Gayle of the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) . Underwriters Laboratories is the company that certified the steel components used in the construction of the World Trade Center towers. The information in this letter is of great importance.

Dr. Gayle,

Having recently reviewed your team's report of 10/19/04, I felt the need to contact you directly.

As I'm sure you know, the company I work for certified the steel components used in the construction of the WTC buildings. [..]

We know that the steel components were certified to ASTM E119. The time temperature curves for this standard require the samples to be exposed to temperatures around 2000F for several hours. And as we all agree, the steel applied met those specifications. Additionally, I think we can all agree that even un-fireproofed steel will not melt until reaching red-hot temperatures of nearly 3000F (2). Why Dr. Brown would imply that 2000F would melt the high-grade steel used in those buildings makes no sense at all. [..]

This story just does not add up. If steel from those buildings did soften or melt, I'm sure we can all agree that this was certainly not due to jet fuel fires of any kind, let alone the briefly burning fires in those towers. That fact should be of great concern to all Americans.

1st Responder Wireless News (1RWN), already very active, and recognized by most media outlets and Public Safety Officials as the "Industry Leader" in most of the East Coast States, is actively looking for News

Correspondents to become active as Incident Dispatchers for your area.

1st Responder Wireless News, a subsidiary company of 1st Responder News, is now consider the leader in the emergency notification industry, sending incident alerts to pagers, cell phones and e-mails.

We are now active in AL, AZ, CA, CO, CT, DC, DE, FL, GA, HI, IL, IN, KY, LA, MA, MD, ME, MO, MS, NC, NH, NJ, NM, NV, NY, OH, OR, PA, RI, SC, TN, TX, VA, VI, VT, WA, WV and Canada. 1RWN has already acquired many well known Paging Notification Services including TAC-9 Paging, East Coast Paging, Ohio Fire News, Maryland Fire Network, Virginia Fire Net, Toronto Fire Net, Metro Fire Paging and the National Incident News Network (NINN), with several additional under negotiations. This is a very exciting time to become involved.

1RWN is in the final stages of development of our Dispatcher Rewards Program which will allow our Dispatchers to log into an online store and buy products ranging from cameras to antenna to two-way radios using points they've earned by being active on our system! EVERY Dispatcher on our system will now reap rewards for their hard work, dedication and loyalty!

1RWN has also recently gone live with the industry's MOST COMPREHENSIVE Customer Interface selection process which allows our Subscribers to select EXACTLY what information they want to receive, from what areas and to what devices. In other words, you can select to receive JUST building collapse incidents in Yonkers to be sent to your cell phone, with bridge closures in Philadelphia being sent to your pager. You are no longer restricted to receiving ALL alerts from a region, now YOU decide what you receive from the average 16,000 monthly alerts sent from any of the areas we cover - 37 States, Washington DC, or Canada! EVERY active 1RWN Dispatcher qualifies for complimentary service!

If you are interested, or would like more information, please check out the website at www.1RWN.com and/or e-mail Scott@1RWN.com.

Why settle for the rest...when you can be with the best?

NYC firefighter stated there was a "bomb in the building ... start clearing out" http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-4574366633014832928&q=9%2F11+bomb

NYC firefighter stated "the south tower . . . exploded . . . At that point a debate began to rage because the perception was that the building looked like it had been taken out with charges . . . many people had felt that possibly explosives had taken out 2 World Trade" http://a1022.g.akamai.net/f/1022/8160/1d/www.newsday.com/includes/fdny-9-11/pdf/9110295.pdf

Assistant Fire Commissioner stated "I thought . . . before . . . No. 2 came down, that I saw low-level flashes. . . . I . . . saw a flash flash flash . . . [at] the lower level of the building [not up where the fire was]. You know like when they . . . blow up a building ... ?"
-- and a lieutenant firefighter the Commissioner spoke with independently verified the flashes

Police officer noted "People were saying, 'There's another one and another one.' I heard reports of secondary bomb explosions . . ."
http://www.thememoryhole.org/911/pa-transcripts/pa-police-reports01.pdf

Firefighter stated "there was an explosion in the south tower, which . . . just blew out in flames . . . One floor under another after another and when it hit about the fifth floor, I figured it was a bomb, because it looked like a synchronized deliberate kind of thing. I was there in '93"
http://graphics8.nytimes.com/packages/pdf/nyregion/20050812_WTC_GRAPHIC/9110290.PDF

A firefighter stated "it looked like sparkling around one specific layer of the building . . . Then the building started to come down. My initial reaction was that this was exactly the way it looks when they show you those implosions on TV."
http://www.nytimes.com/packages/html/nyregion/20050812_WTC_GRAPHIC/Fitzpatrick_Tom.txt

Officer in the New Jersey Fire Police Department who was previously a sergeant in the U.S. Army, said about the south tower: "[I]t sounded like bombs going off. That's when the explosions happened. . . . I knew something was going to happen. . . . It started to get dark, then all of a sudden there was this massive explosion." Then, discussing her experiences during the collapse of the north tower, she said: "[There was] another explosion. That sent me and the two firefighters down the stairs. . . . I can't tell you how many times I got banged around. Each one of those explosions picked me up and threw me. . . . There was another explosion, and I got thrown with two firefighters out onto the street."

A facilities manager in the north tower "was convinced that there were bombs planted all over the place and someone was sitting at a control panel pushing detonator buttons" http://www.thememoryhole.org/911/veliz-bombs.htm

A police report states World Trade Center "Police Desk reporting an explosion on the lower level" 8 minutes after plane crash (page 17, which is page 2 of the Chronological Report of the WTC Radio Transmissions on 9/11/01)
http://www.thememoryhole.org/911/pa-transcripts/pa-police-reports01.pdf

NYC firefighter stated "It actually gave at a lower floor, not the floor where the plane hit. . . [W]e originally had thought there was like an internal detonation, explosives, because it went in succession, boom, boom, boom, boom, and then the tower came down."
http://www.nytimes.com/packages/html/nyregion/20050812_WTC_GRAPHIC/Cachia_Edward.txt

Firefighter states "this, huge incredible force of wind and debris actually came UP the stairs, knocked my helmet off, knocked me to the ground"
http://terrorize.dk/911/witnesses/911.wtc.debris.up.the.stairs.wmv

Similarly, employee of an insurance company in south tower heard an explosion from BELOW the impact of the airplane, an "exploding sound" shook the building, a tornado of hot air, smoke and ceiling tiles and bits of drywall came flying UP the stairwell, and the wall split from the bottom UP http://www.csmonitor.com/2001/0917/p1s1-usgn.html

Firefighter said "I was distracted by a large explosion from the south tower and it seemed like fire was shooting out a couple of hundred feet in each direction, then all of a sudden the top of the tower started coming down in a pancake . . . It appeared somewhere below [the area where the plane had hit]. Maybe twenty floors below the impact area of the plane"

That story line of it "not" being the planes that brought the towers down, is one of the BIGGEST bull shit stories ever to be printed.

IF you "watched" the towers fall, they fell from top to bottom. Straight down (just about). IF there were "Dynamite" used - especially at the ground floors, they would have went out first - and THAT WAS NOT THE CASE. ALSO - you would most likely have seen implosions or adversely - walls "shattering" "OUT" depending on how the charges were placed. That ALSO was not the case. IF you recall, the FIRST attempt to bring the towers down WAS done with "Explosives" placed in the garage area. Yes, it caused damage and some injuries/deaths but as to bringing the towers down - It didn't work.

You bull shit conspiracy theorists really need to get a grip on life. THAT was a fucking attack on our country - pure and simple. OR "maybe" YOU were a part of it! Trying to spin it out of the real truth!

"Lucky" Larry Silverstein

Larry Silverstein is the New York property tycoon who purchased the entire WTC complex just 6 months prior to the 9/11 attacks. That was the first time in its 33-year history the complex had EVER changed ownership.

Mr. Silverstein's first order of business as the new owner was to change the company responsible for the security of the complex. The new security company he hired was Securacom (now Stratasec). George W. Bush's brother, Marvin Bush, was on its board of directors, and Marvin's cousin, Wirt Walker III, was its CEO. According to public records, not only did Securacom provide electronic security for the World Trade Center, it also covered Dulles International Airport and United Airlines - two key players in the 9/11 attacks.

The company was backed by an investment firm, the Kuwait-American Corp., also linked for many years to the Bush family. KuwAm has been linked to the Bush family financially since the Gulf War. One of its principals and a member of the Kuwaiti royal family, Mishal Yousef Saud al Sabah, served on the board of Stratesec.

Now, consider: The members of a small cabal owned the WTC complex, controlled its electronic security, and also controlled the security not only for one of the airlines whose aircraft were hijacked on 9/11, but the airport from which they originated.

Another little "coincidence" -- Mr. Silversten, who made a down-payment of $124 million on this $3.2 billion complex, promptly insured it for $7 Billion. Not only that, he covered the complex against "terrorist attacks".

Following the attacks, Silverstein filed TWO insurance claims for the maximum amount of the policy ($7B), based on the two -- in Silverstein's view -- separate attacks. The insurance company, Swiss Re, paid Mr. Silverstein $4.6 Billion - a princely return on a relatively paltry investment of $124 million.

There's more. You see, the World Trade Towers were not the real estate plum we are led to believe. From an economic standpoint, the trade center -- subsidized since its inception by the NY Port Authority -- has never functioned, nor was it intended to function, unprotected in the rough-and-tumble real estate marketplace. How could Silverstein Group have been ignorant of this?

The towers required some $200 million in renovations and improvements, most of which related to removal and replacement of building materials declared to be health hazards in the years since the towers were built. It was well-known by the city of New York that the WTC was an asbestos bombshell. For years, the Port Authority treated the building like an aging dinosaur, attempting on several occasions to get permits to demolish the building for liability reasons, but being turned down due the known asbestos problem. Further, it was well-known the only reason the building was still standing until 9/11 was because it was too costly to disassemble the twin towers floor by floor since the Port Authority was prohibited legally from demolishing the buildings.

The projected cost to disassemble the towers: $15 Billion. Just the scaffolding for the operation was estimated at $2.4 Billion!

In other words, the Twin Towers were condemned structures. How convenient that an unexpected "terrorist" attack demolished the buildings completely.

WTC Building 7 was a part of the WTC complex, and covered under the same insurance policy. This 47-storey steel-framed structure, which was NOT struck by an aircraft, mysteriously collapsed 8 hours later that same day into its own footprint at freefall speed - exactly in the manner of the Twin Towers.

How could this have happened? Mr. Silverstein gave the world the answer when he slipped up during a PBS television interview a year later, on 9/11/2002:

"I remember getting a call from the...er...fire department commander, telling me that they were not sure they were gonna be able to contain the fire, and I said, 'We've had such terrible loss of life, maybe the smartest thing to do is pull it.' And they made that decision to pull and we watched the building collapse."

As anyone who knows anything about construction can tell you, "Pull" is common industry jargon for a controlled demolition.

One thing is for sure, the decision to 'pull' WTC 7 would have delighted many people. Especially because it has been reported that thousands of sensitive files relating to some of the biggest financial scams in history - including Enron and WorldCom -- were stored in the offices of some of the building's tenants:

- US Secret Service
- NSA
- CIA
- IRS
- BATF
- SEC

- NAIC Securities
- Salomon Smith Barney
- American Express Bank International
- Standard Chartered Bank
- Provident Financial Management
- ITT Hartford Insurance Group
- Federal Home Loan Bank

The Securities and Exchange Commission has not quantified the number of active cases in which substantial files were destroyed by the collapse of WTC 7. Reuters news service and the Los Angeles Times published reports estimating them at 3,000 to 4,000. They include the agency's major inquiry into the manner in which investment banks divvied up hot shares of initial public offerings during the high-tech boom. ..."Ongoing investigations at the New York SEC will be dramatically affected because so much of their work is paper-intensive," said Max Berger of New York's Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossmann. "This is a disaster for these cases."

Citigroup says some information that the committee is seeking [about WorldCom] was destroyed in the Sept. 11 terror attack on the World Trade Center. Salomon had offices in 7 World Trade Center. The bank says that back-up tapes of corporate emails from September 1998 through December 2000 were stored at the building and destroyed in the attack.

Inside WTC 7 was the US Secret Service's largest field office with more than 200 employees. "All the evidence that we stored at 7 World Trade, in all our cases, went down with the building," according to US Secret Service Special Agent David Curran.

What a neat, complete, and fortuitous turn of events was 9/11.

Incidentally, it's worth noting that one of Lucky Larry's closest friends - a person with whom it's said he speaks almost daily by phone - is none other than former Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

More on that cozy little relationship later...

They started out with a story that it was "thermate" that brought them down. When they found out that there is no such thing as "thermate," they switched the story to thermite. Now it is dynamite! If braind were dynamite, the collective "9/11 'Truth' Movement" wouldn't ahve enough to blow their noses!

I recently was in an exchange with someone who didn't keep track of his responses.

One of his last responses to me was to say that the "explosions" could have been every ten floors and that "They" were sloppy.
One of his last posts to another person had him saying "They" had to wire every floor with great precision.
I quoted his response to me in that thread and he went away.

The question that popped into my mind during that exchange was "Why bother with airplanes?"

If they could wire two they could wire two hundred. Blow up a couple, tell the world of the other 198 then blow one a week or one every time a search crew went in.

The recent fear of water and toothpaste (but you can carry on KY-jelly) on planes led me to another way to bring excitement onto an airplane.

Isn't it amazing how you can have an event like 911 on tape and people can view the tape and deny the evidence of their own eyes?
We all SAW the planes hit the towers.
We all SAW the towers fall from the TOP down.
Many of us saw all this in person, not on tape.
The only conclusion I can draw is that some people are just idiots.

They need their ass kicked for even remotely trying to make humor of it in any manner - be it joking or trying to twist it around in this sick manner. Now "that" would be a lovely conclusion.

I'm a Radio Shack employee (Sprint Kisok) and have noticed quite a few Radio Shack postings in this user group. I am trying to determine how to access (if possible) Radio Shack's intranet portal from my home PC, but haven't been able to get the URL link from my boss. Does anyone here happen to know how I can go about accessing the intranet from a internet location??? At my old company we were able to do this, but we needed to know the specific portal URL.

Specifically, I am trying to access the employee policy and employee benefits handbooks, as I have never had these provided to me.

Thanks in advance for your help.

Are you really so ignorant, as to ask that question? I hope not!

Doh, perhaps the fire was only at it's hottest in less than a dozen of the over 100 floors? Once those floors collapsed, the additional weight of these floors could not be supported by the floors beneath them.

Ever watch those documentaries on building implosions? Notice how they spend weeks removing fixtures, walls, etc.? And then drilling holes in supports and walls to hold the explosives? There's a lot of work leading up to the big event. Wouldn't someone have noticed all that going on in the weeks before 9/11? I know there has been a lot of discussion about not "connecting the dots" but surely someone would have noticed that. And what about hauling in all the tons of dynamite? Wouldn't someone have noticed that and said something? "Hey, did someone see a big cockroach upstairs or something?"

btw, in the video, they highlight a "plume" of material ejecting from a lower floor window below the start of the collapse and claim it was from an explosion.

well, there was an explosion of sorts. its called compression. The air had to exit somewhere, hence that debris plume. no dynamite needed!

Building 7 - never hit by a plane but it collapsed!
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jPDNPJAr_Ao

No steel framed building has ever collapsed by fire EVER! The owner of the WTC, who took billions in insurance for the 9-11 attacks on the compund he bought 6 months earlier said on TV the fire service 'pulled the building and you have seen Building 7 falling straight all the way down like a demolition. It takes 2 weeks to wire a building for demolition, so how did invisible men manage it in 7 hours with the entire Manhatten emergency service population in the vacinity?

Your lame ass excuse below is NOT sufficient reason to be perpetuating BULL SHIT. There is NO REASONABLE explanation for continuing that BULL SHIT story - regardless your claims. So YOU are the "fucking idiot" for choosing to place yourself in as a part of it - even in "spreading" it. "YOU" helping to spread the bull shit is just as much a slap in the face of all who suffered in what ever manner.

YES - by continuing to pass it along - YOU ARE getting sick satisfaction by trying to prove your own sick point. Obviously you MUST believe it to pass it on. MOST anyone would say that is bull shit and let it drop at that - case closed. And as I said in another post - if you do NOT believe it, then why perpetuate it? You dumb asses who do this shit - are so full of it, you have no clue......... hell, even the stories don't hold up, they change. That in itself spells BULL SHIT. If YOU aren't smart enough to figure that out - then YOU are the fucking idiot - not me. And I'm sure many in here would agree with that.

Maybe you're just trying to get your 15 minutes of fame trying to make your case, I don't know - but you FAILED. All you did was bring up bad memories and make yourself out to be a real ASS HOLE. IF YOU DO NOT believe in your heart the crap you're spreading - then leave this crap die - don't keep trying to push it. THAT would prove you do NOT believe it. Your words below - are NOT an apology for bringing this up and even at at that - you seem to still try to push the point in doing so. HOW LAME.

Also, you didn't seem to send anything along with it to SHOW that you didn't believe it! You could have said something to the effect of - "here is what I found - <provided the link(s)> - and said - UNBELIEVABLE. Hows that for a bunch of crap?" Just to let people know what was out there and let them debate it IF they chose. Maybe that was your "intention". BUT your "method" tends to lean in the direction of you "believing' it. YOU are the one who made the post - NOT ME. BLAME YOURSELF for the image you portrayed. IF I say something stupid on line - and I have - then that makes me the fool and I must face up to it and in the past - I have - including personal apologies (takes a real man to do that). BUT THIS BABY IS YOUR DOING. WE ARE ONLY CALLING YOU ON YOUR OWN WORDS AND WHAT SEEMS TO BE YOUR APPARENT BELIEFS.

Since you didn't include a reference to whom you were asking of them accusing you - then it seems reasonable to believe that more than I have gathered the same opinion. Therefore - being accused? Well dude - if the shoe fits - wear it. Again - it was YOU who posted the stupid shit. NOT US.

You could be anyone. You could be involved, so what if I have an interest in the World Trade Centre? Find your own interests instead of trying to stop me having one for whatever reason. I'm not saying planes didn't hit the towers, I'm saying it was a cover for their controlled demolition.Those towers were packed to the hilt with explosives all the way down, 73 professors agree. Firefighters heard the explosions, everyone one heard the explosions, you can hear them going off on every level as the tower was blown to dust on every floor as it came down. Why else would concrete and everything else be blown to dust

That "is" the whole point. The WTC was NOT a typical steel frame building. Most Hi Rises make use of huge steel girders at there center and encase these girders in tons of rebar and and more tons of concrete to form massive support columns. Then floors are laid, attached to these massive columns. The only way to bring "them" down is to take out the support columns. The WTC bldgs. were of a totally different design. They built those bldgs. using a technique where the exterior walls "were" built as the supporting structure. The bldgs. had no massive center columns to fall back on. Once you take out a huge section (by a large airplane) you remove the support from everything above it. And then its just a matter of time before things start falling. Its really too bad the bldgs were built that way. If they had been conventional design, they would have had very bad damage to a couple floors, but they wouldnt have fallen. And the death toll would have been much, much less.

Really, can you give us a cite for this? BTW when you cut and paste a video together just using the audio and video you want someone to see (switching shots frequently so no one gets the true context of the video) it isn't worth much. And now we come to Dr. David Ray Griffin.

David Ray Griffin grew up in a small town in Oregon, where he was an active participant in his Disciples of Christ church. After deciding to become a minister, Griffin entered Northwest Christian College, but became disenchanted with the conservative-fundamentalist theology that was taught there. While getting his master's degree in counseling from the University of Oregon, Griffin attended a lecture series delivered by Paul Tillich at the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, California. At this time, Griffin made his decision to focus on philosophical theology. He eventually attended the Claremont Graduate University, where Griffin received his Ph.D. in 1970.

Yes after Dr. Griffin explained physics and structural engineering to us I now know that Bush did it!

And as we all agree, the steel applied met those specifications. Additionally, I think we can all agree that even un-fireproofed steel will not melt until reaching red-hot temperatures of nearly 3000F (2). Why Dr. Brown would imply that 2000F would melt the high-grade steel used in those buildings makes no sense at all. [..]

This is great --- except that it is all a lie.

Kevin Ryan
From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia
Kevin Ryan is a former Site Manager for Environmental Health Laboratories in South Bend, Indiana, a subsidiary of Underwriters Labs(UL) responsible for water testing. He was fired after publicly challenging UL's conclusions regarding the collapse of the WTC.

Research
Ryan said that in the WTC towers case, UL was the company that certified the steel used in construction of the two towers. Although Ryan was not was not involved in the certification for the steel used in the World Trade Centers, he claimed to have been given information, both verbally and in writing, about UL's involvement in in these activities.

However the company's spokesman Paul M. Baker stated "UL does not certify structural steel, such as the beams, columns and trusses used in World Trade Center". In a paper entitled "Propping Up the War on Terror: Lies About the WTC by NIST and Underwriters Laboratories", Ryan states that this statement by UL is misleading.

The NIST also said that steel is not certified and "UL did not certify any steel as suggested. In fact, in U.S. practice, steel is not certified at all; rather structural assemblies are tested for their fire resistance rating in accordance with a standard procedure such as ASTM E 119 (see NCSTAR 1-6B). That the steel was "certified ... to 2000 degrees Fahrenheit for six hours" is simply not true." [1]

But Ryan never stated that the steel was certified for six hours.

The NIST also states that steel heated to 2000 degrees Fahrenheit "softens and its strength reduces to roughly 10 percent of its room temperature value."[2]

Ryan has responded to the UL statements, noting that they directly contradict statements made by UL's CEO, Loring Knoblauch [3].

Ryan wrote to Dr. Frank Gayle urging him to clarify his findings on the causes of structure collapse of the towers, copying the letter to David Ray Griffin, author of The New Pearl Harbor, and to Catherine Austin Fitts, who is a member of the 911Truth.org board. Gayle was, at the time, the Deputy Chief of the Metallurgy Division, Material Science and Engineering Laboratory, at the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST). Gayle headed the "NIST and the World Trade Center" project.

In Ryan's letter, he claimed that a subsequent report from NIST ignored Gayle's initial findings that weak steel was not the contributing factor in the collapse of the towers. Ryan stated: "Your comments suggest that the steel was probably exposed to temperatures of only about 500 �F (250 �C)."

Ryan admitted that he wrote to Dr. Gayle on his own capacity and not on behalf of his employer, UL. Subsequently, UL disavowed Ryan's expertise because he was not employed in the Fire Protection Department and fired him.

Did you ever see the pictures of the WWII bomber that hit the Empire State Building?   It was bad but, just as you said, the building didn't fall and the damage was repaired without too much trouble.

Hey wait, maybe that was an "inside job" too!

I'm always amazed, and quite frankly downright frightened, when I realize that there are actually people out here who have gone though a lifetime of learning to achieve the qualifications necessary required to teach at a post grad level, who are so absolutely stupid; so moronic and juvenile in their approach to simple logic, that they not only accept lunacy like this, but willingly feel the need to propagate this totally worthless and intellectually vacant line of reasoning.(or lack of reasoning in this case)

A two year old child can see that the logic for such an elaborate conspiracy is fatally flawed.
It is absolutely amazing to me that those espousing these elaborate conspiracy theories don't have the simple common sense to realize that no plan this big, or involving the many people that would be required to make it work could ever be pulled off in secrecy.
The simple numbers just aren't there.
Meanwhile back at the ranch............we can all be prepared to fork up even more college tuition money next year to feed these idiot professors, and our kids will have the supreme privilege of working their butts off to get high scores on their SAT's so that we can send them off for four years of indoctrination into a world of over educated no common sense morons who don't have the collective brains to fill a condom.
On second thought, maybe its US who are the idiots for doing this!!! :-)))

Each tower had 40 huge steel columns running up the centre. If the booms you can hear during the collapse were the floors hitting each other and not demolition charges why were these steel columns not left standing but found at the debris pile in uniform 30 foot lengths? Why weren't those columns standing after the floors had suposedly slid down around them?

Some "contractors" in Australia watched a TV program about imploding buildings with explosives. They decided they could do it. Their city had a large building complex that had to come down. They bid on the contract and were the low bidder.

Just like the people commenting here, they packed the building with high explosives, a ton or more. Citizens came out to watch, many were in boats on the nearby lake.

When the explosives went off, the buildings did not all fall down, but large pieces did fly a 1/4 to half mile into the lake and several people were killed. This proves that the professional contractors who bring buildings down without breaking the windows on the building next door don't use very much explosive power, just a small charge in a critical place.

And idiots can make silly mistakes, like hiring a contractor who trained by watching Max eXtreme videos on TV.

I think we should all remember that the hard part of building an atomic bomb was done in three years, between 1942 and 1945. Soon, the Muslim terrorists will have a few bombs, particularly if the party of appeasement wins the Congress in November. Then the next attack on an American city can kill not just 3,000, but 300,000. I'm sure that some kooks will present the idea that the CIA did it so we could start another war for oil.

WWII took a long time to begin, the next big war is starting now, and it is being ignored or worse, called Bush's war, Bush lied, Bush's war for his "oil buddies."

Maybe these people should watch all the old Star Trek shows, one of them had a line, "the purpose of diplomacy is to prolong the conflict." Or something like that.

I'm not saying planes didn't hit the towers, I'm saying it was a cover for their controlled demolition.Those towers were packed to the hilt with explosives all the way down, 73 professors agree. Firefighters heard the explosions, everyone one heard the explosions, you can hear them going off on every level as the tower was blown to dust on every floor as it came down. Why else would concrete and everything else be blown to dust

Sonny, you have NO expertiese in Energetic Materials Science, Demolition of MultiStory Buildings or even Structural Engineering, and NONE of your "So Called Professors" do either. If you had any of the above expertiese, it would be OBVIOUS, to you that these guys are "So full of Shit, there eyes are BROWN". Tell us all when, and how the buildings were filled with explosives, and who did it? Then tell us all, How it was that these explosives could be set off, with the MILES of Detcord it would take to time such a demolition, that would take MONTHS to install, and fill, every hallway and crawlspace, and NONE of the buildings occupants who were there, 24/7, never noticed ANY of that Detcord strung all over the place, or these mythical Badguys installing it all? Then explain to us all just how the demolition was triggered, and timed correctly, when noone could possibley know where the planes were going to hit, and what part of the REQUIRED Detcord would be destroyed by the plane strikes, in each building? Then when you have all that figured out, tell us all, what happened to all the Explosive Residue that should have been left on the Structual Steel when the mythical Energetic Materials Detonated? All the Steel was sampled and tested for Residue, and NO TRACE of ANY Energetic Material WAS FOUND. Dr. Johns "Says" he found traces of SULFUR, for which he has NO Cooroberating Lab Results. BIG DEAL, Sulfur is NOT part of ANY of the KNOW Energetic Materials that would be used in a Demolition of this kind. It is also not a component of Thermite, in the classic formula, or in its Industrial forms. Also Thermite is NOT used in Building Demolitions because it takes way to long to Cut the Steel. What is use is Shaped HE charges with Copper or Brass Cutting Wedges, to finish cuts that were made with OXY/ACT Torches when the building was Prepped for demolition. NO ONE saw anyone makinf stategic CUTS in the WTC prior to 9/11 and the building were occupied 24/7.

Your theories are so far out, as to be unrational, in the extreme....

PLEASE DO NOT INSINUATE THAT I WAS TRYING TO DO SOMETHING ILLEGAL!!! I am not seeking to do this illegally!!! I have a login and password, however I can't find the link (stated to be on radioshack.com).

I am (essentially) looking for Radio Shack's equivallent of an SSL VPN (my previous company uses Aventail). With all the layoffs that have happened, I have not been able to get this information (that as an employee I have the rights to have) from my new boss (and her boss was one of the people let go).

I, and other Radio-Shack owned Sprint kiosk managers in my region, are not always provided all corporate documentation from our regional managers. She has stated there is a link on the bottom of radioshack.com, however we have not been able to find it anywhere on the site. This is all that I am looking for...

PLEASE DO NOT INSINUATE THAT I WAS TRYING TO DO SOMETHING ILLEGAL!!! I was hoping another Radio Shack employee could have pointed me in the right direction of the URL or link...

Code is dead - along with anything else that requires skill, practice, or a little bit of effort.

The folks who want to do away with code should at least learn it and try it - they might find it to be (gasp) enjoyable.  Personally, I could support doing away with no-code licensing altogether.  I realize it won't happen, but I gotta think that if I managed to learn Morse code, then so can "they".  The only thing no-code licensing accomplished in this neck of the woods was to move the CB mentality from 11 to 2 meters.

Agreed. But, please remember that Blow Code is a morse bigot. He (or she) is representative of only a minority of United States radio amateurs. When the major accomplishment in life of such morse bigots has been morsemanship, they will naturally trumpet that singular skill and attempt to moralize it as some kind of positive attribute that one MUST have.

>Here in Canada, a no-code license requires >MORE technical skill than a code license. In other words, here in >Canada you need to learn MORE to pass a no-code license since learning >code is a motor skill, not a technical one.

I applaud Industry Canada's decision on their regulations. My contact with Canadian regulations has been minimal but their website on radio regulations explained it all. Blow Code is confused on the task of the United States FCC in regulating ALL US civil radio; our FCC is not a booster organization for amateur radio or any other radio service here. The FCC only "wants" radio service users to obey the regulations.

Manual radiotelegraphy skill testing for an amateur radio license has existed since the first US radio regulating agency and was maintained mostly out of inertia and the insistence of the ARRL (once it had risen above its competition) through lobbying the FCC. Given the vast scope of today's radio services, the FCC has a far greater task to keep up with its regulatory task. Amateur radio here is low on the regulatory task list of the FCC.

Manual telegraphy IS a motor skill (more correct "psycho-motor" skill) but morse bigots become more psycho about their personal skills, equating it to intellectual knowledge and the ability to reason. Morse bigots see only their kind and want to destroy those who think differently; that is security for their "tribe."

>>You people don't want knowledgable hams anymore.

^^ [an example of the morse bigot and their confusion over psycho-motor skills versus intellectual knowledge]

>Based on the CBers I used to hear on the higher sideband channels, I heard very little of the insults I have seen here spewed by some of the pro-coders. Therefore, I'd say that they were at least better behaved than the aforementioned pro-coders.

The gratuitous insults to Citizens Band Radio Service users has been in existance since 1958 when the USA authorized its use here (as 'Class D' CB on only 23 27 MHz band channels). That's a time span of 48 years.

From its inception CB has NEVER required ANY testing to obtain a CB license. The "license" was pro-forma, a slight revision of the Restricted Class of Radiotelephone Operator license then common to services such as both private and civil aviation pilots.

Nearly a half century ago, US radio amateurs developed a distaste for the US government and these new radio service users for: (1) "Taking away" their 11 meter band (little used, sitting below the largest amateur radio allocation on HF); having the audacity in NOT requiring any testing plus intolerant bitching over NOT having to pass any morse code test. That almost-hatred developed into the bigotry seen today.

The bigotry grew when about a decade after authorization the offshore electronics industries hit the US market with less-expensive CB transceivers and long-haul truckers took to that service. CB users here soon out-numbered radio amateurs by a large margin. With such a huge base of users, a common patois/lingo/jargon grew that was NOT related to amateur radio but had roots in our state highway patrol police organizations. That lingo became quite different than amateurs' use of theirs, so that reinforced the "different-destroy" attitude of the amateurs' bigotry against CB users. Amateurs like to make fun of CB lingo but don't realize their jargon is amusing to other HF radio service users and the military radio. Amateurs tend to think of themselves as first and foremost without realizing that they never were first nor foremost and were always a minority in radio.

>Yes, there were assholes on CB, but CB didn't make them that way. By the same token, learning code will not turn an asshole into a nice guy.

Morse bigots have the egotistical self-definition of

THEIR skills being the only "true" ones for amateur radio. They will rationalize that self-righteous attitude with any number of archaic "reasons" that defy validity for regulatory purposes by radio regulating agencies. In last year's Notice of Proposed Rule Making (NPRM) on the elimination of morse code testing for US radio amateurs, several Commenters cited the ability to "thwart terrorism" by using morse code! :-) Apparently they had taken a Hollywood motion picture fictional depiction of aliens-from-outer-space-invasion as a documentary of a real event [film title was "Independence Day"]!

>CB is just a ham radio in the embryo stage, a zygote. The only >real difference between CB and ham is the choices of bands and the >power of the transmitter, when you really look at things in the most >basic sense.

I see it differently. Human beings like to communicate. That is evident in the enormous growth of cellular telephony and daily use of that; the US Census Bureau stated two years ago the one in three Americans had a cell phone subscription. That is roughly 100 million users of those tiny full-duplex radio transceivers. Several million CB users exist on USA highways (exact figures unknown as CB has been unlicensed for years, but can be approximated from EIA - Electronic Industry Association - statistics on manufactured and imported electronic equipment). FRS and GMRS unlicensed UHF HTs may exceed the million mark by now. In the maritime radio service private boat owners' VHF radios exceed that of commercial ship owners, VHF voice required on inland waterways and harbors for traffic control. Private boat owners are increasing their HF radio use on deep-water travels unsing HF SSB voice (a few radios marketed for sales to both them and radio amateurs).

CB is 48 years old, hardly a youngster/child/teener. It is DIFFERENT than amateur radio on HF, therefore abhored by some radio amateurs stuck in their radio bigotry attitudes put there long ago by their ancestors. If truck drivers have spread a DIFFERENT lingo on CB radio, then they did so out of THEIR need to communicate about THEIR things, not some self-righteous and not-required-by-regulation "traditional" lingo used by hams. Amateurs don't/can't speak to others on HF and are restricted (in the USA) to "non-essential" communications (paraphrased from US regulations). Truck drivers CAN and DO communicate with others on and off the highways freely and with much less of the bigotry displayed by some radio amateurs looking for someone to destroy.

Where does manual radiotelegraphy fit into this?
It doesn't.

I recently gave my son my Uniden BC895XLT scanner. I was in Boca this past weekend and we tried to program frequencies in his area into the scanner. We programmed the analog and trunked frequencies into it (on different banks) and were not able to receive anything. Any help/advise would be appreciated. We used the Boca Raton & Palm Beach County info.

In the maritime radio service private boat owners' VHF radios exceed that of commercial ship owners, VHF voice required on inland waterways and harbors for traffic control. Private boat owners are increasing their HF radio use on deep-water travels unsing HF SSB voice (a few radios marketed for sales to both them and radio amateurs).

> CB is 48 years old, hardly a youngster/child/teener. It is DIFFERENT than amateur radio on HF, therefore abhored by some radio amateurs stuck in their radio bigotry attitudes put there long ago by their ancestors. If truck drivers have spread a DIFFERENT lingo on CB radio, then they did so out of THEIR need to communicate about THEIR things, not some self-righteous and not-required-by-regulation "traditional" lingo used by hams. Amateurs don't/can't speak to others on HF and are restricted (in the USA) to "non-essential" communications (paraphrased from US regulations). Truck drivers CAN and DO communicate with others on and off the highways freely and with much less of the bigotry displayed by some radio amateurs looking for someone to destroy.

There are two ways to communicate when all you have is a transceiver, phone, & CW. All you need for phone is a microphone, All you need for CW is a pencil and paper. If you had to build a transmitter in an emergency, a CW transmitter is simpliest to build. We are after all technical aren't we? We're not just appliance operators.

Eliminating CW removes a way we can communicate. A simple way, where all that's required is an ear, a pencil, and paper, and a skill.

>phone, & CW.

WRONG, WRONG, WRONG...

It is voice, radiotelegraphy, data, pulse, right off the bat, plus a few others which you have NO idea they existed for EMERGENCIES.

Blowcode, you are stuck on HF ham thinking. So were some other morse zealots and morse bigots in this forum many years ago. Their scenarios were invalid comic-book stuff then and now you've just repeated the same. Deja phooey.

On HF you can find some EMERGENCY calling frequencies...but those aren't on ham bands. I recall only two, one for maritime, one for civil aviation over-ocean routes. Aviation has some more but you aren't worth the time to go look them up in the huge Part 2 regulations of Title 47 C.F.R. Both are VOICE.

Over or near land the aviation VHF frequency is 121.5 MHz. Military aviation is 243 MHz. Both are VOICE. Airborne transponders (those are transmitter-receivers) has a "squawk" code just for emergencies and, in a pinch, you can push the IDENT button. Transponder output will automatically show up on ATCRBS radar displays. The little HTs in military parachute backpacks can do both VOICE and DME/TACAN (the 'pulse' I mentioned). [you probably don't know what DME or TACAN are yet they've been around for a half century.

On waterways (not open ocean) there are VHF frequencies for EMERGENCIES. VOICE. Go look those up in Part 2. VHF VOICE is used in the USA in harbors and inland waterways. Need EMERGENCY frequencies on land? Plenty of those, band specific, organization specific, freqs available if you are serious about having to use them. Those frequencies are kept open 24/7 in most areas and have emergency power backup. Three major land PLMRS bands, can you name them? [I didn't think so]

Ever hear of a cellular telephone? By now, I'll bet you noticed them. One in three Americans have one. Little 1 GHz HTs with lots of added features with tens of thousands of cell sites to connect to telco. You can punch up nine-one-one on them same as a wireline phone. Nine-one-one is operated 24/7, done by professionals. Cell sites and telephone exchanges all have "floating" emergency power, can remain operating on AC power outage.

Think you can call for a paramedic with your little "CW" transceiver, Blowcode? Or a fire truck? Police car? Sorry, Blowcode, they use VOICE and above 30 MHz. Some paramedic ambulances have EKG instruments with radio coupling to a hospital. Some police departments have data terminals IN their cars (LAPD does as do many adjacent incorporated cities here).

>All you need for phone is a microphone, All you need for CW >is a pencil and paper.

BWAAAAAHAAAA!!!!! How are you on "straight wire CW" Blowcode? Can you do 'twenty' just rubbing two bare wires together? [remember, you have to scrape OFF the insulation to make contact...]

>If you had to build a transmitter in an emergency, >a CW transmitter is simpliest to build.

!!!BUILD?!?!?!??? BWAAAAHAHAHAHAHAH!!!!!!!!!!!

Is your QST featuring the "Tuna Tin Two" handy and able to survive a full EMERGENCY environment? Do you have the parts? Do you have a power-less soldering iron? Do you know how to use hand tools? [I don't think so]

Once you've cobbled together something that MIGHT work, HOW DO YOU KNOW? Did you have test equipment that survived the EMERGENCY, Blowcode? [I'll bet you think so] How do you know you're on a frequency that you think is good for emergencies? You do "laying on of hands" to miraculously make it work? In this (unspecified) EMERGENCY do you have two functioning hands to use the tools to 'make' this thing? Will you need AC power to run it? Will it work on DC? From where will the electrical power come from? Rub two Handbooks together? Cobbling together a one-tube transmitter MIGHT be possible, provided you have plans, the parts, a suitable tube, and the right values of components (which you seem to think you 'know' exactly?. It might take 24 hours or so...at which time the "emergency" would be over and the 'emergency' victims might be long dead.

You can spout bullshit bragging only so far. You've gone too far, Blowcode. You DEMONSTRATE that you can cobble together a simple 'transmitter' out of a pile of parts which do NOT know of ahead of time. SHOW US or someone. Put your money where your big mouth is.

Here's what the right-thinking folks do: Have a radio or radios ALREADY available for emergencies, along with a power source, on some 'emergency frequency' that you KNOW WILL BE HEARD. The "CW-saves-the-day" scenario is BS that went out before the GMDSS was activated seven years ago; the USCG is NOT monitoring the 500 KHz "CW" frequency and neither are many other equivalent national maritime aid agencies. A few years ago a gal teenager picked up a call for help on an FRS HT from a stranded mountain climbing team...voice, not "CW", miles away. Made the Washington and Oregon newspapers. [FRS isn't on ham bands, Blowcode, and the gal wasn't a "radio op"]

>We are after all technical aren't we?

You (sure as hell) sound like you can barely wire up a doorbell. With a QST article on it to show you how.

>We're not just appliance operators.

Right...in addition you are an unthinking nuisance.

>Eliminating CW removes a way we can communicate.

Eliminating a code test does NOT "remove its use."

If morsemanship is so damn good, it DOESN'T NEED TESTING. Folks will take to it without needing to be tested if its such a wonderful thing.

>A simple way, where all >that's required is an ear, a pencil, and paper, and a skill.

Blowcode, you need a SKULL more than a skill...one with a working brain inside it. Try to get a new brain. Quickly.

Now go back to reading those comic books from the ARRL. You know, the "Archie" ones that you saved up long ago.

Newsflash: ALL radio operators, code or no-code, are "appliance operators" as you colloquially state. A radio is a means to communicate. Knowing code just adds another way to use that radio.

   Quite true, Opus!  Thank you for pointing that out.

   Let us hope that Blowcode sticks to his ARRL "Archie" comic books while he mimes the "Wizard of Oz's" scarecrow wishing he had a brain.  :-(

Build a transmitter? I could humiliate you there, but that's been done already.

There is NOTHING about removing code testing that will stop you from using code. Wanna use code? Go ahead, knock yourself out. You can hammer on that key all night long, for all anybody cares. Hammer on it in your sleep. Hammer on it in the shower.

Just don't tell me that I am a bad person if I don't.

Even if the no-code ticket was made 6 months or 2 years in active length it would not matter one bit. Amateur radio in the public eye is unknown and your average young person is far more interested in the Internet, online video, instant text messaging and cellphones. There are too many commercially available technologies, which are far cheaper I may add, than amateur radio which while a curosity is still a functionally and technologically obsolete pursuit. Sorry but that's the truth.

The 9/11 terrorist attack on America which left almost 3,000 people dead was an "inside job", according to a group of leading academics.

Around 75 top professors and leading scientists believe the attacks were puppeteered by war mongers in the White House to justify the invasion and the occupation of oil-rich Arab countries.

The claims have caused outrage and anger in the US which marks the fifth anniversary of the terrorist attacks on Monday.

But leading scientists say the facts of their investigations cannot be ignored and say they have evidence that points to one of the biggest conspiracies ever perpetrated. Professor Steven Jones, who lectures in physics at the Brigham Young University in Utah, says the official version of events is the biggest and most evil cover up in history.

He has joined the 9/11 Scholars for Truth whose membership includes up to 75 leading scientists and experts from universities across the US.

Prof Jones said: "We don't believe that 19 hijackers and a few others in a cave in Afghanistan pulled this off acting alone.

"We challenge this official conspiracy theory and, by God, we're going to get to the bottom of this."

They believe a group of US neo-conservatives called the Project for a New American Century, set on US world dominance, orchestrated the 9/11 attacks as an excuse to hit Iraq, Afghanistan and later Iran.

The entire structure does not have to melt - just enough key components.

For a physics professor he sure seems to ignore a lot of concepts such as momentum, torque, leverage and conservation of energy...

In article <1157718712.421116.182710@m79g2000cwm.googlegroups.com>, landnotloans@hotmail.com smoked some really BAD dope, beamed down from the Mothership, spotted a Sasquatch, dodged a Chupacabra's claws, sniffed a whole lot of "chemtrails," foamed at the mouth, howled at the Moon and bloviated :

> The 9/11 terrorist attack on America which left almost 3,000 people dead was an "inside job", according to a group of leading academics.
> Around 75 top professors and leading scientists believe the attacks were puppeteered by war mongers in the White House to justify the invasion and the occupation of oil-rich Arab countries.

"Top professors"???? NONE of them has experience in relevant fields: aviation, structures, demolition, operations, covert ops, etc.

> The claims have caused outrage and anger in the US which marks the fifth anniversary of the terrorist attacks on Monday.
> But leading scientists say the facts of their investigations cannot be ignored and say they have evidence that points to one of the biggest conspiracies ever perpetrated. Professor Steven Jones, who lectures in physics at the Brigham Young University in Utah, says the official version of events is the biggest and most evil cover up in history.

"Leading scientists"??? Experts in the appropriate fields support the NIST explanations -- NOT those of Jones, et. al! Jones' field of expertise are: cold fusion, the journeys of Jesus Christ through the Americas. He has zero experience in structures or anything else relevant to the subject.

Jones and co. are making a lot of money selling lectures, books and videos to the ignorant, the galactically stupid, the gullible and the malicious.

> He has joined the 9/11 Scholars for Truth whose membership includes up to 75 leading scientists and experts from universities across the US.
> Prof Jones said: "We don't believe that 19 hijackers and a few others in a cave in Afghanistan pulled this off acting alone.

He is obviously willfully ignorant of real conspiracies!

These guys are continually blowing smoke in political newsgroups and getting shot down everywhere. They use more aliases than Carter has pill!

I realize I'm adding a post to this thread, but...

In general, don't bother replying to the creatures who post this sort of drivel. They're living in their own little spheres of stupidity and either don't read any follows-up or don't care.

Because at the point where the picture is taken, the fires were not yet hot enough. Either Discovery Channel or A&E (I can't remember which) had a program where they built duplicates of the offices including furniture, computers, etc., then threw in Jet A and set them on fire. The Jet A along with all the burning plastic easily got hot enough to reach temperatures that cause the type of steel used in the WTC to loose something like 80% of it's strength. Very interesting show.

Steve Jones Is Certifiable Loon, and anyone who knows him will state so, in just those words. He isn't a Structural Enginee., He isn't an Energetic Materials Science Chemist. He has no experience with explosives in any way, shape or form. He is a Physics Professor with dubious Publication History, looking to make a 'Big Splash" in the media. When will these folks just blow away with their own Hot Air......

I thought it was strange that this guy was a physics professor. What would a physics prof know about how the towers fell? That's the realm of engineering. A physics prof would start the problem with "ok, assume a zero gravity, zero atmophere environment..." ;)

Wah! Wah! Wah! Boo fricken Hoo... the mean old coder is picking on me... Get a life! Anyone that can get that emotional over not getting their way has more issues than not being able to copy code.

You may want to consult a mental health worker...

In your owners manual under truobleshooting there is a section on how to reset and how to initialize the scanner.
If you don't have a manual you can join the Pro93-95 Yahoo group and download one there.

>I wonder where robesin is hiding? Fred said "ass..."

Jimmie Noserve showed up with his bimonthly Numbers (his period on?)...still trying to "prove" that Technician class licensees aren't really no-coders. :-)

Robeson showed up wondering who "Robesin" is...only proving that the poor guy can't realize it is himself. He always was illiterate in regards to alliteration.

>Welp, if Fred had a tour in Ohio as an Army recruiter back in the 70s...

Ya know, that always bothered me. Why would an ex-NAVY person be "recruiting for the ARMY"? [explanation for the trash-mouth newcomers: Robesin once claimed - in here - that was what his late father did, but didn't say when or exactly where] The Army has always used active-duty Army NCOs for such tasks since before 1973 (the ending of the "Draft"). Strange LIE by Robeson, must have been done at time of some bad goods he swiped out of the Sharps box.

A "Sharps box" is colloquial term for a plastic container (usually wall mounted) for biological waste in medical facilities, sometimes referred to as just a "Sharps." Made by B. D. Sharps company and not affiliated with the dullness of the pro-coders. They can be seen in most doctors' offices and hospitals all over the country.

Robesin is going to come back and say "it's not nice to talk about medical things" as if he is some kind of code caduceus bearing "judge" of medicine. :-)   He is a nurse (probably using a wastebasket-salvaged 1983 edition "Physician's Desk Reference" as his medical terminology guide). If he REALLY wanted some REAL rank, he could devote the next 9 years of his life to add MD after his name and honestly say he "saves lives." Tsk, he can't save his own life from the disease of impersonation. May a colony of helicobacter pylori set up housekeeping in his duodenum! :-) [he can share that with papa Fred] Freddie baby is prolly setting up a spittle session in here bitching and bad-mouthing anyone who doesn't want to relive times past a half-century ago when Kode was King. We'll see what his kind of foaming-at-the-mouth trash talk against "no-coders" will be. :-) interest that he still does that of course he still goes on when he does post about being robbed in "incentive licensing" back roughly 50 years there was the real mistake and all the result of the ARRL's power being misused, everything since has been trying to clean up the mess that caused

Tell before that point what was the Code test speed reqrired for the General License? some where I recall it being 5 wpm

Indeed I comented on that last year said th Bio Steve wrote for his old looked like a lie that produced another of his aleged lawsuits that was going to filed against me

I don't think Robeson could cut it leaving ot the issue of could Robeson do the courework (I am not surre

I could) he could never survive the process with his temper he'd blow somewhere and likely kill some one (either by fucking up or flat out murder) he dropped out of Nursing school by his own admission (maybe he was asked to leave who knows)

They are free to join. They ask for a donation to get the files to upload to the popular trunked scanners. But the databases are free.
To join it is only $2.50 a month. Very cheap considering you may spend that much daily at 7-11 for a cup of coffee in the morning and a big-gulp later in the day.

Actually 16 years ago (1990) but the movement to end the morse code testing for AMATEURS had begun much earlier than that.

Prior to the opening of the Internet to the public in 1991 the ARRL could retain attornies in DC to promote Hiram Percy's ideals of morsemanship. [paid for by ARRL members] However, no-code-test advocates did manage to get their Petition into the NPRM stage in 1990. That passed into LAW in 1991 and the rabid morsemen have been frothing at the mouth over it ever since.

Interestingly enough, the ARRL had to retain a lobbyist organization after the Internet went public...in addition to the law firm on retainer. [also paid for by ARRL members] The competition for the FCC's ear had grown now that amateurs could "talk" to the FCC directly instead of being filtered through the ARRL. Rightly so since the ARRL membership has never been more than a quarter of all licensed US radio amateurs. Democratic principles in action for this republic, not the monopolistic pseudo-"representation" of a minority group organization.

>he is going to whine for another 50 year or till he drops dead

Has Blow Code ever identified himself by callsign?

Blow Code is more likely just one of the 'others' under a new pseudonym. Either that or the pro-code-testers are just all parroting the ARRL dicta (or is that "papal encyclical'?) from the Church of St. Hiram in Newington.

My take on that is the monotonic beeping did it. :-) Rabid morsemen reject all communications outside of their very tight little RF spectra and sing praises of their very narrowband mental viewpoints. Maybe that's what they think is "intellectualism." :-)

Or, it may be some undiscovered malady in their brain which also keeps them from advancing beyond their mental youth. They can't think "outside their box" but then few morsemen can think inside the box containing their radio circuitry. It seems that anything other than their twitching fingers carressing their code keys is some mysterious, alien "force" in those radio boxes, a deep mystery to them. The signs pointing to that are their inability to talk technical other than parroting (again) the ARRL information spoon-fed them. That lack of self-confidence or insecurity may lead to their defensive "we are better than you!" shouting about their beloved psycho-motor skill of morsemanship.

Gotta love their LACK of technical details, all the time praising to the skies of their narrowband signals yet an almost utter lack of understanding Shannon's Law, the universal relationship of message rate, random noise, information error, and bandwidth. Maybe they can't THINK faster than 20 to 40 words per minute? :-)

US amateur radio appears to be quite alive and well today. That despite the ARRL's insistence that all amateurs should emulate the standards and practices of the 1930s. Instead of trying to take a neutral, hands-off policy on code testing, the ARRL ought to look at itself and the reason they can't get membership from the three-quarters of all amateur licensees in the USA. That majority IS the future of US amateur radio, not the frozen-in-their-youth delusions of some olde-tyme morsemen.

   I doubt it. Robesin has a peculiar format in his text and shouts

   That mold isn't so much warped as just OLD.  It was fine in 1930 but 1930 is 76 years ago.

   Jimmie Noserve got hopeless when he tried to be some kind of "informed insider" into the aerospace business here and his attempts  to "correct" REAL military veterans.  He also tried to foist off his old "$100 rig" as his own design but it was really a near-copy of the "HBR" series that began in QST years ago.
   Jimmie made the mistake of posting on that (relatively new website) showing his HBR version, the very same photos he had in a link posted here when he claimed it was all "original."

   Tsk, that won't stop the "investment" olde-tymers...they will be bad-mouthing no-code-test-advocates until their code keys are pried from cold, dead fingers.

   Or maybe nobody wants to talk to him... :-) >the CW has seen the light that being they betrayed the ARS by listening >to the ARRL what 50 years ago

   I don't think the ARRL "betrayed the ARS".  I believe that they sincerely thought that morsemanship was THEN a topmost skill of US radio amtaeurs.  Fifty years ago would be 1956 and not long after the passing of ARRL co-founder (and president-for-life) Hiram Percy Maxim.  "T.O.M." used his editorial pages to promote morsemanship in the 1920s and 1930s.

   The original core group of the ARRL were go-getters and smart enough to realize that, to make enough money as an organization that came out on top, PUBLICATIONS were the key to survival.
   ARRL was first a very small group of local New Englanders, formed 5 years after the first (and still surviving) national organization, the Radio Club of America.  There were lots of "national club" competitors in the 1920s but those eventually dropped out.  RCA still exists but is not much concerned with amateur radio.

   Prior to the Internet going public in 1991, the only major presence for US amateur radio in DC was the legal firm on retainer from the ARRL.  ARRL kept promoting themselves as "representative" allegedly for the amateur to the FCC but suspiciously more like a "filter" of amateurs' opinions. That changed dramatically once the FCC got their website going and ramped up to take Comments electronically. The ARRL had to retain a second firm in DC for lobbying.

The evidence is an observation of the number and kind of Comments on 98-143 "restructuring" versus Comments on all those Petitions and last year's NPRM concerning code testing elimination. The pro-code-test advocates' Comments were straight out of the League hymn book about morsemanship with a few adding in nebulous advantages for "homeland security" necessities! [those Petitions began after 11 Sep 01]

What is more telling about the League's stubbornness on their pro-code-test stance is that the IARU took a firm stand on changing the ITU-R amateur radio regulations compulsory (by administrations) morse testing for any license having below-30-MHz privileges...the IARU wanted it OPTIONAL by all administrations (at their discretion) a good year BEFORE WRC-03. The ARRL wanted to keep the compulsory regulation. After WRC-03 the League took a neutral stance, neither for nor against code testing in the USA. It's still a "ARRL versus the World" situation.

It should be abundantly clear that "Incentive Licensing" was never about "advancing" in amateur radio beyond getting TITLE, RAND, and STATUS. That was VERY important to the controlling coterie of the League, folks who wanted to be "better" than others...in a hobby activity.

What "incentive licensing" DID create was just the opposite of "good fellowship" among amateurs, that of CLASS DISTINCTION and a "pecking order" based largely on morsemanship. The morsemen won it. Never mind that radio technology was already far advanced from the 1930s' style of amateur radio and that morse code was falling by the wayside in every other radio service, the League still (stubbornly) held to the belief that all amateurs "should" be able to be morse skilled...even four decades after the 1930s.

The League lobbied for and got the "vanity license" system so that olde-tymers could get their 1x2 and 2x1 super-special guru-status callsigns. Even more status symbolism. Combining "vanity" calls and "incentive licensing" there was a perfect setup for all who managed to get both to crow and holler they WERE BETTER than all others. Good fellowship went out the window...rank, status, title RULED.

That's all they have left in this new millennium, Mark.

Some of them, such as Blow Code and Hambrecht still think they are "better than others" in all aspects, not just morsemanship. They LIKE that. So much so that they are in great personal fear of losing that very precious rank, status, title, and privilege that MIGHT happen if the code test is eliminated. They will LOSE their "better than you" rationalization. Internally the sky will have fallen on their self-perceptions.

Personally, I think radio and electronics is totally fascinating. So much so that I made a career choice of it while studying for an entirely different sort of work. Professional work, not some amateur dabbling, yet I liked to make electronic things in my home workshop. Things other than work-related tasks. It is FUN, personally rewarding, not "work."

I got into Big Time HF comms 53 1/2 years ago and have seen what modes DO work well and on a 24/7 basis on long-haul circuits that HAD to be kept working. Years later some KID is trying to "moralize" me into "working on morsemanship?" He (or she) can go shove it somewhere...until he (or she) can prove they've done more than I in radio communications...which they have NOT done yet in here.

Once, a very long time ago, I thought that becoming a "ham" was a cool deal. That was before the commsats, before technology had fully gotten with the semiconductor era, before the wonderful way we can get over most of the world via PCs and the Internet. Why IS it that some have to be a grand champion of the 1930s over seven decades later? What are THEY trying to prove? I could care less about 1930s technology and the "radio standards" of then. I live in the NOW. If some dumbshit wants to moralize about "working" and "investing" he (or she) can go get some flagellation and suffer themselves for their own "cause." I'm not about to join him (or her) in such moralistic self-abuse/mis-use. If these self-styled emperors want to flap their new clothes in my direction, I'll just keep on pointing out that they are NAKED (and ugly).

The FCC thought so too - well into the 1970s.

He also promoted many other things on those pages, such as technical progress, operating skills, public service, and the observance of government regulations.

Publications were one way to support the organization. They also supported amateur radio by offering low-cost information specifically for the radio amateur.

But it didn't stay that way for long. By the time of the 1917 shutdown - just three years after ARRL was founded - it was a national organization.

One of the cofounders, Charles H. Stewart, 3ZS, lived right here in Radnor, PA. Hardly "local" in those days.

Why are you suspicious, Len? Anyone could petition the FCC directly, and many did, long before the Internet and ECFS.

All ECFS did was to make it easier to petition and comment.

Back in the 1960s, when the changes known as "incentive licensing" were being debated, FCC received over 6000 comments from individuals and groups. There were at least 10 proposals besides the ARRL's. Those other proposals were taken seriously enough by FCC to get RM numbers.

> The evidence is an observation of the number and kind of Comments on 98-143 "restructuring" versus Comments on all those Petitions and last year's NPRM concerning code testing elimination. The pro-code-test advocates' Comments were straight out of the League hymn book about morsemanship with a few adding in nebulous advantages for "homeland security" necessities! [those Petitions began after 11 Sep 01]

The fact is that the majority of individuals who commented supported the retention of at least some Morse Code testing. The majority also supported elimination of the Morse Code test for the General Class license.

> What is more telling about the League's stubbornness on their pro-code-test stance is that the IARU took a firm stand on changing the ITU-R amateur radio regulations compulsory (by administrations) morse testing for any license having below-30-MHz privileges...the IARU wanted it OPTIONAL by all administrations (at their discretion) a good year BEFORE WRC-03. The ARRL wanted to keep the compulsory regulation.

Not true! Not true at all, Len.

The fact is that way back in 2000 or 2001, the ARRL BoD changed their policy wrt S25.5. They decided to neither support nor oppose changes to ITU-R S25.5.

Given the strong support from many other member countries to change S25.5, the ARRL's no-opinion policy pretty much guaranteed there would be majority support to change S25.5.

> After WRC-03 the League took a neutral stance, neither for nor against code testing in the USA. It's still a "ARRL versus the World" situation.

Wrong again, Len!

In ARRL's petition to FCC, they proposed eliminating the Morse Code test for General but retaining it for Extra.

The majority of individuals commenting on the NPRM wanted the test eliminated for General.

The majority of individuals commenting on the NPRM wanted the test retained for Extra.

The two majorities are not composed of all the same individuals, but they are majorities.

"RAND"?

Do you mean Remington Rand, Ayn Rand, or the South African monetary unit?

Nope. That's not what it was about at all, Len. Do try to get your history straight.

The fact is that the "incentive licensing" changes were an attempt to return to a system something like that which existed before February 1953. The complexity of the final result was due in large part to it being pieced together from the numerous non-ARRL proposals mentioned earlier.

btw, the 1951 restructuring that gave us the license classes with names rather than letters was not primarily driven by ARRL.

How so?

Did you forget about the written tests?

How many other radio services used Morse Code in 1966, Len?

Was there a shortage of trained radiotelegraphers during the Vietnam War?

btw, Len, did you ever manage to get your Extra out of the box? It's been more than six and a half years now...

Well, maybe they are, Len. Or maybe they aren't.

Why does it bother you so much?

Do you have a need to look down on everyone?

>   They LIKE that. So much so that they are

How will any currently licensed amateur lose anything if the Morse Code test is eliminated?

> They will LOSE their "better

How?

If they really are better than you, they'll still be better without the test. And vice-versa.

Me too. Amateur radio particularly.

Funded by the taxpayers, too.

Does being paid for something make someone automatically "better", Len?

> Things other than work-related tasks. It > is FUN, personally rewarding, not "work."

But not rewarding enough for you to get an amateur radio license, it seems.

Or have you gotten that Extra out of its box, as you told us you were going to do, way back on January 19, 2000?

> I got into Big Time HF comms 53 1/2 years ago and have

Using equipment supplied and paid for by others. With a team of several hundred people trained to do the job.

That doesn't make you more qualified to judge what amateurs do - self-funded and largely self-trained.

> Years
> later some KID is trying to "moralize" me into "working

Is youth somehow wrong, Len?

> He (or she) can go shove it somewhere...until he (or she) can prove they've done more than I in radio communications...which they have NOT done yet in here.

I see.

What if someone older than you, with more radio experience, told you that you should work on your morse code skills? How would you react?

> Once, a very long time ago, I thought that becoming a "ham" was a cool deal. That was before the commsats, before technology had fully gotten with the semi-conductor era, before the wonderful way we can get over most of the world via PCs and the Internet.

What about your posting of January 19, 2000?

> Why IS it that some have to be a grand champion of the 1930s over seven decades later? What are THEY trying to prove? I could care less about 1930s technology and the "radio standards" of then. I live in the NOW.

Then why do you tell us so much about your past?

btw, if you are not interested in becoming a ham, why are you so vocal about the requirements?

> If some dumbshit wants to moralize about "working" and "investing" he (or she) can go get some flagellation and suffer themselves for their own "cause." I'm not about to join him (or her) in such moralistic self-abuse/mis-use.

You sure seem to spend a lot of effort arguing about it, though.

Why?

> If these self-styled emperors want to flap their new clothes in my direction, I'll just keep on pointing out that they are NAKED (and ugly).

Perhaps they are simply holding up a mirror.....

Gee, Len, it's been more than three years since the ITU treaty changed. Some countries have eliminated Morse Code testing, some haven't, and at least one (Canada) has worked out a unique solution to the debate. Meanwhile the USA rules on the subject haven't changed since 2000.

Are you frustrated because your will has not become law...yet?

Gee, Len....do you think posting that way will cause people to change their minds and agree with you?

Do you think FCC would be convinced by such arguments?

Is that sort of posting your idea of how a "professional" behaves?

I think they betrayed it wether they meant to or not by as you will sowing the seeds for the battles that were to follow

indeed in looking only back at Maxim I submit they betaryed even him

I don't care what Fred says. He's a bad impersonator of some of the great anti-Technicians of years past...

They just want to be appliance operators Fred, they don't care if they can't commute.  They want to pick up a microphone and start gabbing. A ham license means nothing to them, and will mean even less if ham radio tests are dumbed down more.

JDB, You're back.

Did you get tired of playing with your model Cho-Cho trains? You could try stamp collecting for something else to do, but you might not be smart enough to figure out what side of a stamp to lick.

Are you puting any effort into learning CW Mark or are you just being lazy waiting for things to get dumbed down some more?

Cityfreq is worthless, full of inaccuracies, misspellings, etc.
Radioreference is the best.

What the hell do you know about real "frat houses", you illiterate moron, besides when you watch a rerun of "Animal House" on TV? You sure were never in a real frat house at any time.

Someone said he allegedly was a big-time QRM'er of the MCARS weekend net on 7.258 but about a Year ago after local hams DF'ed the QRM'ing signals to his general area.

   Mark, you don't have to apologize to anyone.

   If Slow Code isn't a throwback to 7 decades ago, he is one example of a thoroughly brainwashed morseman imprinted with the Beliefs of 70 years ago...and all the mythos of "code saves lives" that spread like kudzu after the Titanic disaster of 1912.

So far, Robeson has NOT been convincing. He IMPLIES and ALLUDES to things but hardly ever states anything outright and then never with any referencible sources that anyone can access.

Robeson has tried to construct an edifice, indeed almost a temple in which we should all venerate his mighty accomplishments AND, at the same time, has leveled barrages of personal insults and deragatory accusations against all challengers. That latter action negated his mighty constructs and established his fraud. That 'edifice' has to be torn down...if for no other reason than being an eyesore to us in his field of dreams.

In reality, the STATE Guards (not all states have them) are little more than state political constructs to enable a few to play soldier and otherwise establish their machismo. Part of that is the ever-present "conspiracy theory" coupled with some kind of imaginative armageddon scenario of a doomed future where everything in a state is in ruins or anarchy but the "state guard" can step in and "restore order."

The curious thing about the latter is that some of the Believers in the efficacy of morsemanship think in the same manner...that only amateur radio survives the worst emergency and that only morsemanship can be used to call for help. That is patently absurd in light of reality but founded on the mythos of morse that grew following the Titanic disaster of 94 years ago.

As to fully-activated National Guard units, the states have various plans to keep the NG structures and land intact, usually using civilian personnel (law enforcement, probably) and that does not require a lot of personnel. In the field of communications for the REAL public safety agencies, those agencies are well-supplied with many forms of communication of their own (outnumbering amateur licensees according to EIA data of about 15 years ago) that is NOT part of the "telephone infrastructure" that many ham-patriots erroneously think "always fails in an emergency." Most public safety agencies in the USA have established emergency-scenario plans and they periodically train/drill for those procedures. Very few amateur radio local organizations do that.

For several months past I simply did not bother accessing Google for this newsgroup. It was a waste of time when the macho middle-school mental-adolescents came in and talked trash and filth to anyone. How many of those anony-mousies were actual amateur radio licensees is unknown and irrelevant. The known licensed amateurs just didn't do anything about them. That presents a very BIG negative on the amateurs' ability "to police their own." They couldn't. They can't despite their brags about such "policing."

Robeson once made claims that he was IN one of the local Los Angeles HRO stores, with "friends while visiting them." A big problem with that was that was his claimed time-line and NOT being able to describe, even in minor detail, the locations or the surrounding territory. The first HRO in northern L.A. was in Van Nuys, CA, in the center of the San Fernando Valley. [bought my Icom R70 there years ago] That HRO moved to Burbank, CA, a few years ago, at the corner of Buena Vista and Victory (a major intersection with shops at all four corners). It is across the street from a relatively new food supermarket having a huge elevated sign visible from all four corners. Robeson could not describe that sign, let alone the location, even though it was easily visible (he didn't name the supermarket). It is very familiar to me since my wife and I shop there regularly. Robeson couldn't name a single store in the mini-mall across the street from the market even though there's a Radio Shack outlet next to that HRO. That HRO has now moved again (they had a window sign announcing that for weeks) and we will see if Robeson wants to repeat all of his lies about being in any one of them. :-)

Brian and I were being sarcastic about "boot camp." The US Army and the USAF never had "boot camp." In those branches is was called BASIC TRAINING. It still is and is usually referred to familiarly as just "Basic."

I "took Basic" at Camp Gordon (now Fort Gordon) which was in 1952 a Signal Corps center and now THE Center for Army Signal Corps. We had to learn basic infantryman soldiering, how to "close with the enemy and destroy them." No fun in that part of Georgia near Agusta. The only communications taught in Basic were courier duties and connecting/using an EE-8 Field Telephone plus laying field wire (real grunt work carrying that auto-pay-out wire box on a back pack). After 8 weeks of Basic we were assigned to Signal Schools...Field Radio and TTY at Gordon, radar-microwave-photography at Ft. Monmouth, NJ. For me, "fun" didn't begin until Monmouth and the ability to actually handle radios, examine their guts and theory, use them on the air.

Things have changed greatly in military communications since 54 years ago. The Field Radio MOS long since became extinct and with it the need to learn manual radio-telegraphy. HF radio is still taught but more as an adjunct to VHF radios common from small units to battalion level...the SINCGARS family of digital voice/data, optional frequency-hopping and encrypted modes with a quarter million produced since 1989 and all operational...to be replaced soon with a compatible but upgraded family of radios with more and better features. HT-sized SINCGARS-compatible radios are being used in Iraq and Afghanistan now (you can see them on news telecasts). The ONLY radiotelegraphy classes are centered at the Military Intelligence School at Ft. Huachuca and that for (passive, listening-only) Intercept Analysis purposes, not communications.

Some non-active or never-serving morsemen in here have insisted that Special Forces "use" radiotelegraphy since a Special Forces Communications Sergeant MOS is required to know that. Special Forces are very macho in image but they, like the USN SEALs, are a very small group of specialists, for (as their name implies) Special operations. The major Army and land-force marines effort is done by regular land soldiers. "Behind the lines" (quaint euphemism) comms can be done by regular land signal units by encrypted data over VHF-UHF, relay by aircraft or satellite, extemely hard to intercept. Even in the 1990 First Gulf War there was no "CW" used from "Behind enemy lines." The AN/PSC-3 did that or, in a few locations inside Iraq, by VHF voice or data.

The extreme mobility of USA land forces now, and in 1990, is described in the many land-forces reports done on the First Gulf War, namely Operation "73-Easting." The final hundred hours of the First Gulf War outdid the best panzerfaust actions of Rommel in North Africa of 1942-

   1943.  About two orders of magnitude better.  One thing that the American military did copy from Rommel's units was "Nevis" or NVIS, Near Vertical Incidence Skywave, short-distance ionospheric bounce that some hams deride as "cloud burning."  Nevis works rather well and has been a field procedure in USA-USMC-USAF land-to-land comms for at least a quarter century.

   World War 2 was over 61 years ago.  Vietnam War was over 33 years go.  The First Gulf War started (and finished almost as quickly) 16 years ago.  The Korean War went into a state of perpetual Truce 53 years ago.
   Amateur morsemen still gorge their imaginations on the Titanic disaster CW comms of 94 years ago.  Time has gone on and technology has changed...for all but those hidebound morsemen are still pipe-dreaming their imagined glory and self-steam after watching old WW2 movies on late-night TV, demanding that future amateurs learn morse to defend their homeland.   :-)

You might have gotten some priviledges, but that was only because ham radio has been dumbed down and you didn't have to make an effort to earn them.

You're too friggen lazy to put forth an effort to earn anymore priviledges, that's why you want ham radio dumbed down.

Now, if I lived near you, I would do CW practice for you to upgrade. I honestly would. What you should do if you have an HF receiver is to try to find some code on air to practice copying.

Maybe you could talk N9OGL into making Omega One a code practice station.

He could send Code practice runs in between all the shitty songs he plays.

I got this Scanner as part of a trade, And I already have a Icom 8500, so no need for it.
Its brand new, I took it out of the box and made shure everything was there. Also played with it for a few days and works great!!!
Has the plastic on face and as I stated..........Brand New.
Price new is: 575.00   I want 450.00
ritchi50@optonline.net

The Uniden Bearcat BCD996T is a state-of-the-art scanner radio with Trunk Tracker IV� and automatic scanning capabilities. You can store in the dynamic memory conventional frequencies such as police, fire/emergency, marine, air, amateur, and other communications. Click here for a a complete list of frequency coverage. You can store and scan services that use Trunked Radio Systems and so much more. You can use the scanner�s Scroll Control to quickly select channels and frequencies and you can automatically program channels in a system using the Auto Store feature. The high resolution display indicates the radio's status in detail.

The BCD996T also introduces the first-ever GPS-enabled scanner, allowing the product to automatically select nearby radio systems for scanning. The BCD996T also offers APCO 25 digital capability, allowing consumers to monitor the activities and signals of city and government service departments, and features advanced scanner technology in an in-dash or mobile mount design.

The GPS-enabled feature offered by the BCD996T provides automatic system selection, which permits the scanner to turn system reception on or off depending on the user�s location, and allows the user to define the scanner display to show location-based information. In addition, when a GPS unit, not included with this scanner, is connected to the BCD996T, it will alert at areas of special interest, such as dangerous intersections, school zones, or general points of interest.

Featuring APCO 25 capability, Uniden�s BCD996T is poised to further enhance Uniden�s offerings to public safety and increase interoperability between agencies using different types of radio systems. Uniden�s BCD996T will not permit users to monitor sensitive, encrypted signals from national and local security services.

The Bearcat BCD996T also offers Close Call� RF Capture Technology, Dynamic Memory Management, Fire Tone-Out, and Multi-site programming as well as 6,000 channels and a frequency range of 25 MHz to 1.3 GHz (excluding cellular and UHF TV frequencies). Please click here for a detailed list of features.

Front-set serial port using the same connector as BC246T/BCD396T/BR330T/SC230. Rear DB9 Male connector (for convenient direct plug-in of GPS Serial cable). Either port can be configured to be PC interface or GPS interface. The memory architecture supports dynamic allocation with up to 500 systems and 6000 channels.

Mark, you have to give up on this anonymous "Slow Code." He is just another of the Bigot Morsemen. He cannot adjust to changing times, changing technology, or (perhaps) changing his underwear.

The FCC establishes regulations for ALL United States civil radio. What the FCC says, goes. The ARRL doesn't rule, morsemen don't rule, and old, old traditions don't rule. The FCC has NEVER said anything about "earning" a license...a license applicant must take an FCC-approved test and score above an FCC-established minimum percentage correct answers. That's all there is. FCC regulations are LAW and that LAW can be changed by democratic principled means. That LAW is not established by some minority group who cannot advance beyond primitive on-off carrier keying.

This "Slow Code" (like all bigoted morsemen) has taken up a role of "I-am-your-leader" gang-banger bullshit bragging and usual calling names of those licensees "below" him. Poor guy (or gal?). That's all this "Slow Code" has...SOME manual morse code skill. He might be right at home in an 1870s telegraph office but his attitude is neither for democratic principles, nor for good fellowship in a hobby, nor as a human being participating in a discussion forum.

The FCC doesn't "rule" on any amateur radio "traditions." It simply regulates ALL US civil radio (amateur radio is a small part of that) and mitigates interference when it happens. The FCC follows the LAW in their charter, permitting an open forum for Comments on NPRMs, even R&Os, open for ALL citizens and even allowing Comments from non-citizens.

Bigot morsemen do NOT allow any opinions opposing their own over-inflated self-defined opinions. They want to RULE all the Homies in da Ham Hood. They think they "own" ham radio when the only thing they've "earned" is a bad attitude against them. It's a wonder they haven't taken up Spark transmitters (even though damped-wave mode is forbidden by law). Spark and morsemanship went together in olden days, days well before the existance of any of the bigot morsemen in this forum. "Slow Code" needs a time machine to go back to that old era since he can't keep up with modern times nor the democratic principles of the representative republic of the United States of America.

As a professional in radio communications, one who began in and on HF over a half century ago, I have contempt for the over-inflated egos of the bigot morsemen. None have made their case valid enough to warrant morse code testing for amateur radio licenses forever. But, the ARRL is toadying to them, vainly hoping to increase their minority membership by sticking to the amateur practice of a half century ago. ARRL membership hasn't increased beyond a quarter of all licensed radio amateurs in the United States, nor has the ARRL favored, ever, the VHF-and-up amateur radio licensees beyond the barest minimum of mentions.

Sooner or later the FCC will yield to PUBLIC pressure to modernize US amateur radio beyond the old-fashioned limitations and favoritism towards morsemanship lobbied for by the ARRL. It may not come in "Slow Code's" lifetime since he is of the group where a morse key has to be pried from his cold, dead fingers. Poor "Slow Code," old before his time, unable to fit into this new millennium of radio technology.

My Pro-95 suddenly stopped responding to the keyboard. It is locked up on a channel and there is no way to make it do anything. It does not respond to the Lock/Light key either. Using WIN-95 program and the serial cable I was able to clear all channels but it still does not respond to the keyboard. Please help!

Go for it, Congenial Fred, show 'em who's boss in da ham hood!

Ya know, US amateur radio is supposed to be about good fellowship and all that warm and fuzzy stuff. Poor Fred long since ran out of warmth and his mind is fuzzy...tsk.

What are YOU "better at," Congenial Fred? Morse code? I'm sure you are a whiz at that. Anything else except getting a bad score on the range after shooting off your mouth? I'll bet not.

Wow (yawn) 50 years a ham (and still not cured). I've been a professional in radio longer than that. Fascinating stuff that radio and electronics technology. Morse code isn't technology per se...it was being done over 40 years before the first radio-as-a-communications-medium was demonstrated in 1896. But you "are better" than non-morsemen because you passed a NON-TECHNICAL, NON-INTELLECTUAL manual morse code test...as an AMATEUR. [big Ben Stein "wowwww" here]

"Welfare license?" Just because there's no manual morse code test for Technician class? Oh, my, but the FCC does NOT say anything about "welfare licenses." That's only your own BIGOTRY vomited up. Almost half of all US amateur radio licenses are now in the Technician Class. Are you deliberately trying to alienate half of all ham licensees? Well, Congenial Fred, you are doing real good on that alienation part.

Have fun on "the bands," Fred, there's plenty of your kind there, the bigoted morsemen, the self-proclaimed gods of AMATEUR radio trying to be "leaders" in da ham 'hood.

Fred, support stem cell research. You've lost too many neurons required for good fellowship...maybe some stem cells can help restore them.

Brian, sudden realization! We may have found the illegitimate biological father of Stebie Robeson!

Same ego, same "better than you" bad attitude, same lack of good fellowship, same 9-year-old's sass, same-o same-o! Incredible!

Then again he may be a cousin to that anony-mousie "Slow Code."
Lots of inbreeding going on in the morsemen ranks.

I wonder where Jimmy Noserve is hiding? Fred said "shut up!"
Jimmy would have a hissy fit if'n he saw that...:-)

You haven't answered that from a licensed amateur Extra, "Slow."

Now, now, "Slow," you are starting to sound like one of those inbred bigoted morsemen in here. You can't discuss anything reasonable-like, only cuss at those who disagree with you. :-)

>Now go bullshit with Dr Death on 11 meters, and don't come back until you

I don't know any "Dr Death," "Slow," nor do I operate on "11 meters."

Further, you are ten kinds of short on ability to threaten.
Your threats and "orders" become recycled electrons doing nothing but dissipating a tiny bit of heat. <yawn>

Take YOUR beloved morse code test and shove it up YOUR ass.
Push real hard...there seems to be an obstruction there.
Must be your own four neurons in the way.

I extend fellowship to REAL hams, you no code idiots are not hams, simply CBers that have the ability to read at a third grade level.

Everyone serves a purpose, even if only as a bad example... No code, non showering, non intellectial, whiners holding welfare licenses meet that criteria to a "T".

Now that you have been responded to in the manner you accuse all code able hams of, you may cease your trolling...

I don't really give a flip one way or another if you ever know code, I just wish the bunch of you would stop playing "pity me" and lamenting the fact you do not have a no code Jesse Jackson type to take up your cause. You have a license, enjoy it and if you don't care to learn the code, someday you won't have to. In the mean time shut up with the whining and get on with life.

The license is only worth the investment you have in it, no effort - no value! If you spent half the time learning as you do bitching you would be at 40 WPM.

So who are you remaining five guys going to talk to?

BTW, I didn't know we lost ham radio and need to take it back.

Blow Code, think before you type will you? You spend entirely too much time on the computers. Get on the radio and talk to all the old timers on CW will you?  They are lonely and need you there.

Fred HaFrom: Fred Hambrecht on Sat, Sep 2 2006 6:02 pm

>I extend fellowship to REAL hams, you no code idiots are not hams, simply >CBers that have the ability to read at a third grade level.

Tsk, tsk, Fred. Had you been able to read RRAP before, you'd know I have no amateur license, only a commercial one. :-)

So, you think that US amateur radio is defined ONLY by morsemanship? Of course you do. You are unable to cope with any other definition. The FCC doesn't think so, Congenial Fred. Only you and the rabid olde-tyme morsemen think so.

>Everyone serves a purpose, even if only as a bad example...

You fill that bill to a "T" Congenial Fred. :-)

>No code, non >showering, non intellectial, whiners holding welfare licenses meet that >criteria to a "T".

"Non showering?" :-)   Shirley, you can think of some metaphor better than that! :-)

"Non intellectial?" Oh, you mean 'non intellectual." Tsk, tsk, Congenial Fred, if you wish to appear 'intellectual' you really ought to learn to spell correctly... :-)

"Whiners?" Poor congenial Fred, can't understand that there are several valid reasons being held by the majority AGAINST morse code testing. You want to impose YOUR imperial will on the majority...   Tsk, tsk, not a nice democratic principle idea.

"Welfare licenses?" I got my First 'Phone in 1956, one test session at the Chicago Field Office of the FCC. Had to pay my own way in on the train. No snow, ground was level, and I kept my shoes on the whole time. Guess that isn't near as good as all them olde-tymers in the ham boonies, huh? :-)

>Now that you have been responded to in the manner you accuse all code able hams of, you may cease your trolling...

Fred, you've shown yourself to be a first class morse BIGOT, one with a totally closed mind who lives in the past. But, that's not unusual among some of you kids (your birth year is 1939 but mine is earlier). After you hit the magic 65-year mark you go all shirty and start whining yourself about how "tough" YOU had it and how "loyal and principled" you are and how the "younger generation is no damn good" because they don't like YOUR ideals of a long-ago youth. I know, I've seen it hundreds of times...and am damn glad I never succumbed to such mental sickness. :-)

Oh, and I do NOT "accuse all code able hams" of anything, only YOU, Fred Hambrecht, and all the other morsemen bigots who trash-mouth everyone who doesn't care for morsemanship.

I don't "troll," congenial Fred, I CATCH. I've presented my views before the FCC clearly, logically, with facts researched and noted. Many times. I don't sing praises about morse code or testing for the simple reason that there's no praise for either.

>I don't really give a flip one way or another if you ever know code, I just >wish the bunch of you would stop playing "pity me" and lamenting the fact >you do not have a no code Jesse Jackson type to take up your cause.

Tsk, are you a racial bigot ALSO? I'm not black, congenial Fred, don't fake any religious titles nor academic titles nor the usual bragging bullshit common to so many amateurs. I've been on this planet longer than you have and made my own way without asking for welfare. Up yours and enjoy your food stamps.

Well, maybe no "Jesse Jackson" but you pro-code-test mavens DO have the Church of St. Hiram on your side plus all the Brother Believers in Newington alla time singing the praises of "cee-double-yew" that all good maxim-fearers must follow. To the letter. To a "T."

> You have a license, enjoy it and if you don't care to learn the code, someday you won't have to.

I have a license, Freddie baby, but it NEVER had any requirement to learn morsemanship skills. I've had other FCC licenses, Freddie, and those didn't have any need to learn code. Of course those were all commercial-professional, not the mighty amateur kind (which you no doubt consider much, much more valuable).

Freddie booby, 53 1/2 years ago the US Army had me and several others starting to operate HF transmitters of higher output power than was ever allowed to amateurs. NO license test needed. NO morsemanship skills needed...NO morse code modes were used to keep dozens of circuits open 24/7.

I didn't have to know or learn morsemanship over a half century ago and haven't needed it in all the time up to now. You come along like some adolescent male and talk trash to me and other no-code-test advocates and say I "must?" Oh, my, you must think your morsemanship skills are super-macho with superpowers!

> In the mean time shut up with the whining and get on with life.

Shut your own, bigot Freddie. You get NO breaks acting like a morseman bigot. Bigots don't deserve any civility.

"My life" is going on just dandy without you, Freddie. Try to stay out of it. Intrude on it and you get stepped on.

> The license is only worth the investment you have in it, no effort - no value!

Oh, wow, trotting out the "moral paragon" ploy are you? :-)

Sounds like you are getting ready to enter the seminary at the blessed Church of St. Hiram!

> If you spent half the time learning as you do bitching you would be at 40 WPM.

One "learns" a psycho-motor skill? :-) It is DEVELOPED, Freddie boy, isn't one damn thing "intellectual" about it.

Pressing the government for a change in certain laws, such as the regulations concerning amateur radio licensing, isn't "bitching," colonial Fred. It is simply a democratic process to change archaic laws and regulations that have no use today. But, you fear change. Such might detract from your mighty self-image of an amateur morseman, god of radio, and ruler of the ham-ways. :-)

Or is it that you want to CONTROL others, have them do as YOU command and to hell with democratic principles of law? Clarify that for us, Freddie, you seem to be swinging both ways.

Freddie, there is zero-point-zero interest in "learning" any psycho's motor skill in this new millennium. It isn't used for communications in any other radio service under USA regulations and won't be...except in the time-retarded imaginations of some US radio amateurs who dream of everlasting glory of the beeperman.

There is one helluvalot MORE INTERESTING, INTELLECTUAL things to do in learning the theory behind the front panel. Don't speak blithering drivel about "beauty and majesty" of monotonic on-off tones while caressing your vibroplex...the only "theory" there is turning something on and turning something off. You can do that with a buzzer if it turns you on so strong.

You want to do 40 words per minute using morse? Fine. Go for it. I've been doing ONE HUNDRED TIMES that with data and that's at a slow speed. The world's comms aren't about manual telegraphy, Freddie, that's a long-past time that began before you and I were born. It is OLD stuff.

Now you go right ahead and enjoy your "ARS" (Archaic Radiotelegraphy Society). I'm sure you feel all authoritative with your federal AMATEUR license and all. Tell everyone you are "federally authorized." Invite your friend and neighbors in to view your mighty license certificates (suitable for framing). Feel proud for you are a MORSEMAN! Welp, if Fred had a tour in Ohio as an Army recruiter back in the 70s...

Mr Benevolent Congeniality, while it may be your desire to fulfill the wishes ot the no-code troll, there are just too many trolls on RRAP. I you go around and start fufilling the expectations of all trolls, this newsgroup will end up being trashed and unreadable.

Do you want that on your conscience?

Try:

or http://www.milliron.net/nascar/  (which has both primary and secondary frequencies)

Careful, careful, Mark...Sister Nun of the Above, now the Mother SUPERIOR is BACK, ruler in hand, ready to spank the knuckles of anyone who DARES say anything negative about the blessed, sacred ARRL!

I was literally going back 50 years to 1956 and remembering how both the electronics hobby and the (much, much bigger) electronics industry was doing...preparing to move to California and the aerospace industries that year. Frankly, the ARRL wasn't keeping up with the electronics industry other than keeping QST afloat with advertising revenue.
Since they were largely unaware (from their publications)
what the (then) long-haul radio communications were doing, they couldn't really decide which way to go for amateurs.
Their decisions were based largely on ignorance, especially that of SSB. The commercial-military folks on HF were already USING SSB on HF and had been doing it for over two decades by 1956...yet the ARRL wanted amateurs to believe that "amateur radio 'pioneered' SSB." :-)   Bullshit.

Well, it's a subject which is damn clear to outside observers but the Believers are about to strike a blow for the Church of St. Hiram. Mother SIPERIOR is back in her habit of one-liner sentences thinking she can slay the dragons (of her mind) which defile the sanctity of the Newington folks who "know what is good for amateur radio!" :-)

Prior to 1990 there were already FIVE different license classes in US amateur radio. The no-code Technician class made it SIX. A decade later the FCC chopped that in half. Rightly so in my estimation. It had gotten literally Byzantine in structure with the privileged bandplans and who could use what mode. It was worse than the commercial-professional operator licenses. The Restructuring was sorely needed for the avocational activities.

The worst blow to the rank-status-title morsemen was cutting the code test rate down to a single, low one, well below the exhaulted, royal rate of 20 WPM that they overused for bragging rights before 1998. :-) Those extra super special morsemen lost NO PRIVILEGES ON THE BANDS but the sky fell in on their bragging rights. Boo-hoo, poor morsemen. :-)

   other than bill payments, Mark.

   The rabid amateur morsemen are just full of themselves.
   They have lost their ability to RULE by that singular skill, are now worried that they might lose all their rank, title, status, and privileges when the code test is finally eliminated.  Few of them seem to have much for themselves beyond that bragging right.  <shrug>

Oh, oh, here comes Mother Superior again, waving

Mother, I'm NOT posting "to the FCC" here...just to a mixed group that includes rabid morsewomen such as yourself.

>Is that sort of posting your idea of how a "professional" behaves?

Tsk, tsk, Mother, "when in Rome, do as the Romans do."
In here the AMATEURS hang out. Ergo, one must adopt language these AMATEURS us. If that means offending you, TS.

You don't like that? Go back to the cloister. Pray for redemption of your soul after being among those you perceive as evil no-coders.   :-)

Thank you guys for the advice. In the meantime I decided to do the unthinkable, RTFM. On page 83 of the manual I found how to reset the scanner (press a pin through a hole on the side of the scanner) and how to initialize it (press 0 then 1 after turning it on). I tried it about 5 times without results but after the sixth attempt the scanner came back to life and started responding to the keyboard. It seems to be fixed now. However, it lost my confidence and I resurrected my old PRO-37 and keep it as a backup.

You're living proof CW was a good filter for lazy lids. It didn't keep all the lids out, but it did keep stupid ones out until they come up with the no code tech license.

You can be a ham, Mark, but only if you decide to make an effort to be one.
Dumbing down ham radio the way you want is like burning down the club house and selling the land to CB'ers.

I won't suggest stamp collecting for you Mark. You would probably whine that the little boxes where you paste the stamps are too small and you won't go any further until the post office makes bigger boxes, and that the problem is the big stamp collectors want stamp collecting to be like a frat house and squeeze out the little guy.

Ping real Hams,

You'll want to use CW if you ever have to save len Anderson, that should help him change his brain cell regarding the value of Morse.

Thanks

For Sale: HP3586B Frequency selective level meter VLF receiver

This unit has the high stability oscillator and is excellent condition. No dents, no scratches, and no dust inside whatsoever. I believe it was rack mounted at an environmentally controlled site and seldom used. I don't have the feet and the small blank panels (where the rack ears normally go) but these are common size. This unit works fantastic and has a new NICAD memory battery installed. I replaced one of the jacks in front with a BNC (easily reversed mod that screwed in). I also put a nice black anodized aluminum spinner knob on the VFO shaft encoder for ease of tuning. It makes for a very sensitive VLF receiver and can measure extremely low levels with great accuracy. By the way, there is an RF output jack on rear which enables you to sweep filters etc.

$495 plus shipping from central florida
